Tougher juvenile law urged

Treat them like criminals - study

OTTAWA (CP) — It is time for the courts to stop treating juvenile delinquents as misguided children and start treating them as criminals, a federal government study says.

A report tabled in the Commons today says children should not be dealt with as harshly as adult criminals, but young persons who commit offences must take responsibility for their acts.

The report previews a new Young Offenders Act the government intends to introduce in the Commons in the next few months to replace the Juvenile Delinquents Act, which dates from 1908.

The law now says the courts should give juvenile delinquents parental-style care and discipline. They should treat a juvenile delinquent "not as a criminal but as a misdirected and misguided child . . . needing aid, encouragement, help and assistance."

Calling this philosophy outdated, the report says "young people will be held accountable for their behavior" under the proposed law.

But the new law would raise to 12 from seven years the age at which children could be charged with criminal offences. Only children over 14 could be tried in adult courts, and only for the most serious offences such as murder.

The Juvenile Delinquents Act applies to young persons under the age of 16 in most provinces, under 17 in British Columbia, and under 18 in Quebec and Manitoba.

The government proposes establishing a uniform age of 17 or 18 at which young persons would be charged in adult courts.

The report also recognizes that "young persons require supervision, discipline and control," and would give juvenile court judges more options in sentencing.

Juveniles could still be sent to reformatories for up to two years, but they could also be given an absolute discharge, be ordered to pay a fine up to $1,000, to compensate their victims or to do community work.

The new law would give young persons more rights in juvenile court and would allow them to tell their side of the story to the judge.

The government also proposes sharply reducing the number of offences a juvenile could be charged with.

The present law defines a juvenile as a child who violates the Criminal Code, federal or provincial statutes, municipal bylaws or is "guilty of sexual immorality or any similar form of vice."

Ex-NDP minister Bill Hartley launches open-door program

Socialist takeover of penniless bank

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Former NDP cabinet minister Bill Hartley has achieved every socialist's dream — he's bought his own bank.

It comes complete with walk-in vault, tellers' wickets, ledgers and account books and a manager's office with fireplace. There are spacious rooms upstairs which once housed the bank staff, and a luxurious seven-foot bathtub.

But there's not a penny in the cash drawers.

It's the old Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at Bay and Douglas which the bank vacated earlier this year after 69 years at the same stand.

Hartley bought the building recently and plans to move his insurance agency there on Dec. 1.

"The main floor of the bank lends itself to an insurance office," Hartley said Thursday during a tour of the bank.

He plans no changes to the historic building except a fresh coat of paint and eventual restoration of the heavy oak tellers' counter now covered by plastic wood panelling.

Hartley, former MLA for Yale-Lillooet and public works minister until the NDP defeat in 1975, likes to tell visitors of the bank's past.

It is one of the last of about 65 prefabricated wooden buildings in several styles built by the bank across the west during the boom years before the First World War.

Except for the foundation and brick work, every part of it was made and fitted together at the Vancouver plant of B.C. Mills, Timber and Trading Co., which produced hundreds of houses and commercial buildings and shipped them by rail as far as Winnipeg.

This particular bank was manufacturd in 1909. The pieces were packed in two boxcars and shipped to Victoria for erection. A similar one was demolished a few years ago in Ladysmith and identical buildings — all built from the classical-inspired designs by the Commerce bank's architects, Darling and Pearson of Toronto — were dotted across the Prairies. Creston, B.C., and Humboldt, Sask., had banks just like Victoria's.

All the pieces were numbered and prepainted at the factory. With the accompanying handbook, a crew could quickly put the bank together like a set of building blocks — an important advantage when towns sprang up overnight along new railway lines. The first bank in town acquired a competitive edge.

City council Thursday night liked Hartley's plan so much to save the building, it unanimously endorsed his request to rezone the property from light industrial to limited commercial. It also exempted him from a street widening plan for Bay which would have one day forced him to move the bank 10 feet over.

PO near crack-up, Ottawa gets blame

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's postal system is on the verge of a nervous breakdown and the federal government is largely to blame, says Dr. Noel Hall, an experienced labor mediator.

Wildcat strikes, slowdowns and major confrontations between the 23,000-member postal union and post office officials will erupt as groups line up in bargaining combat positions for talks before the expiry of the collective agreement Dec. 31, Hall said Thursday.

He told an Industrial Relations Management Association workshop that the postal system is bordering on collapse and that anyone who thinks differently is reading the situation through rose-colored glasses.

Government officials have caused labor unrest by applying aggressive, counter-productive tactics in an unsuccessful attempt to resolve problems, he said.

"The problem is that rank-and-file employees, along with their leaders, have lost confidence in the proposition that the legally established bargaining and grievance processes will generate something approximating equity."

Hall said there are two alternatives to handling dissident action: punish union members for their behavior or design a way of dealing with grievances and removing the need for unlawful behavior.

However, punishment does not work, he said.

"The option chosen by the federal government shows all the signs of being counter-productive."

Hall, who has patched disputes between labor-management groups such as the post office, school boards, hospitals and the Insurance Corp. of B.C., warned association members against "one-shot panacea solutions to industrial relations problems."

They are pawned off as magic formulas for labor ailments but they are not effective, he said.

One such trap is right-to-work legislation, he said.

Young defends city police

Mayor Mike Young defended the Victoria police Thursday against what he called irresponsible and unfounded allegations that a few officers used excessive force against the so-called street kids.

The Times published a story Monday quoting community worker Shirley Wakeham's charges about some city police officers.

The mayor, who is chairman of the civilian police board which supervises police operations, told council he has received no complaints about police conduct, verbal or written, concerning alleged abuse of juveniles in the downtown area.

"The story does not appear to have any justification or substantiation whatsoever," he said.

There is a proper procedure for registering complaints which is not very difficult, he said.

Ald. Robin Blencoe said that "it takes a lot for some people to make a complaint" against the police.

He suggested there should be some independent agency or government department which could receive reports of complaints, rather than requiring people to complain first to the police.

"When you lay a complaint, that's a serious matter. People often say to me: 'If I do that, are they going to remember me?' " Blencoe told council.

"I say why don't you lay a complaint? They say: 'Who are they going to believe, three upstanding police officers or me?' "

Young said the province and the police commission may wish to consider the mechanics of laying a complaint against police. Some people may have "an inherent dislike of calling the police or appearing at police headquarters.

"It may well be that the allegations could be received by another level of government, but there still has to be an inside investigation."

He added: "I can assure you I have uncovered no evidence of intimidation by the police department."

Blencoe said he's sure that 99¾ per cent of police officers are blameless but "in any kind of institution you get some problems."

"Would you raise that to 100 per cent?" asked Young. "They're (problems) still yet to come. They haven't happened."

Ald. Larry Ryan said he talked to several policemen and they are very concerned about "blanket accusations."

"They would like identification. They would like to co-operate with the police board in resolving these problems."

Public less tolerant, wants more punishment

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians will demand harsher treatment for criminals in the 1980s — especially those convicted of violent crimes — because of rising crime rates, a government study says.

The report, presented Thursday to a closed meeting of federal and provincial justice ministers, says the public is becoming less tolerant of predatory crime such as rape, murder, assault and robbery.

These crimes will continue to increase during the next 10 years as juvenile delinquents get older, says the report prepared by a research worker in the solicitor-general's department.

As a result, public pressure will grow for "more punitive measures including more and longer terms of imprisonment," it says.

Individuals already are more likely to be the victim of a crime than they were 10 years ago. But it is more likely to be a property crime — theft, break-in or fraud — than a violent crime.

Public opinion polls show the sentences believed to be appropriate punishment for these crimes "are often very severe (and) harsher than those actually handed down by the courts."

This hard-line attitude is also reflected in a dramatic increase in the number of people who are held in jail awaiting trial.

Canada holds almost twice as many people in jail before their trial than does England, the report says. It speculates that this may partly be due to backlogs in the courts caused by increased case-loads.

People are beginning to feel that the criminal justice system should look out for the rights of victims just as it protects the rights of those accused of crimes.

874,000 home dreams die

TORONTO (CP) — A rise of more than four percentage points in mortgage rates this year means that about 874,000 Canadian families have lost the ability to qualify for a $60,000 five-year term mortgage amortized over 25 years on a $66,000 home, experts say.

Mortgage rates have risen to 14.75 per cent from 10.5 per cent earlier this year because of successive increases in the bank rate geared to keep Canadian loan rates competitive with U.S. rates.

The estimate is based on Statistics Canada's 1977 income distribution survey. It is the difference between the number of Canadian families with annual incomes large enough to qualify for the $60,000 loan at 14.75 per cent and the number that would have qualified when rates were 10.5 per cent.

Today, a home owner considering a $60,000 loan on a $66,000 house will have to come up with $736.81 a month for mortgage payments, compared with $557 when rates were 10.5 per cent. When looking at a mortgage application, lenders normally require mortgage interest and taxes to make up no more than 30 per cent of a family income, to make sure it can comfortably carry the debt.

A family wanting a new house would have to earn $34,440 annually to qualify, compared with $27,280 at 10.5 per cent.

Frank Clayton, president of Clayton Research Associates Ltd. of Toronto, said that 1,813,000 of Canada's 5,866,000 families in the survey made more than $27,280 annually.

The higher mortgage interest rates affect monthly payments by signficant amounts.

In a standard 25-year mortgage with interest compounded semi-annually, the basic factors for various interest rates per $1,000 of mortgage are:

12 per cent — $10.32 a month per thousand.
13 per cent — $11.03.
14 per cent — $11.74.
15 per cent — $12.47.

Homeowners can work out their own payments by multiplying the above numbers by the size of the mortgage. For example a $20,000 mortgage at 14 per cent would be $234.80 per month ($11.74 times 20) and a $50,000 mortgage at 14 per cent would be about $587 per month ($11.74 times 50).

The real cost of a $50,000 mortgage over 25 years is $165,363 at 13 per cent, $176,082 at 14 per cent and $186,924 at 15 per cent.

New magazine makes debut

Inflation wallops U.S.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — United States' consumer prices rose a steep 1.1 per cent during September as the country headed towards its biggest yearly dose of inflation in more than three decades, the government reported today.

The figures were released amidst continuing controversy over high profits being reported by U.S. oil companies. Texaco Inc. today reported the largest percentage increase in profits for the third quarter of any major oil company — a gain of 211 per cent to $612.18 million.

Prices paid by American consumers have now climbed at an annual rate of 13.2 per cent during the first nine months of 1979.

The actual inflation rate over the first nine months of the year is 10.1 per cent.

Energy and housing costs continued to soar last month and food prices climbed at the fastest pace since last spring, the Labor Department said in its monthly analysis.

Meanwhile, Citibank of New York, the nation's second largest bank, raised its prime lending rate to a record 15¼ per cent.

The government says the 15 largest refiners in the United States have overcharged customers $5.2 billion since the Arab oil boycott of 1973 — the equivalent of five cents a gallon for all the gasoline sold in the U.S. in the past year.

That total was announced as the energy department brought new charges — denied by both firms — against Texaco and the Atlantic Richfield Co., claiming pricing irregularities of about $200 million.

Guerrillas spear U.K. plan

LONDON (AP) — Guerrilla leaders at the Zimbabwe Rhodesia peace talks today rejected proposals that Britain rule directly during a transition to independence and that the white-led government security forces be left intact.

Describing the British plan as outrageous and a recipe for rigged elections, the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance demanded its fighters be combined with government forces to form a new army.

In counter-proposals offered at a 45-minute meeting of all sides, Front negotiators urged that the United Nations supervise the proposed election and send in a peacekeeping force.

Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, chairman of the seven-week-old talks, has ruled out supervision by the United Nations "or any other body," including the Commonwealth.

The Front announced it would appeal to the Commonwealth, alleging that Britain has distorted the mandate for this latest peace bid, which was agreed to by the Commonwealth at its summit last August in Lusaka, Zambia.

After the meeting, British officials defended Carrington's insistence that Britain guide its war-torn rebel colony to independence in the same manner it shed most of the rest of its empire in the 1960s.

"We are offering an assertion of British government responsibility and authority," British spokesman Nicholas Fenn told reporters. "We have great experience in this field. Many of the Commonwealth leaders gathered at Lusaka owe their positions to British readiness to preside over free and fair elections and hand over power to nationalist leaders who have opposed them for years."

Front spokesmen said the guerrillas could not accept as fair any election supervised by a British governor using the forces and public servants of Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa's black-white coalition government.

He said Britain abdicated its responsibility when it failed to "suppress rebellion" in 1965. It was in 1965 that the previous white-minority government led by Ian Smith unilaterally declared independence in a bid to stave off black rule.

Meanwhile, in Lusaka, President Kenneth Kaunda said he will close all guerrilla bases in Zambia once a genuine black-majority government is installed in Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

Doctors warned of charges

KAMLOOPS (CP) — British Columbia doctors were told Thursday that if they continue to publish their fee schedules, they could be charged with price-fixing and ordered to pay a $1-million fine or spend five years in jail.

Dr. Mel Petreman, president of the B.C. Medical Association, said he has just learned that physicians services and fees are included in price-fixing amendments made to the federal Combines Investigation Act in 1976.

"The federal government passed some amendments which included physicians' services as part of that act," Dr. Petreman said. "We can now not put a fee in a schedule because that would be price-fixing."

He said the penalty for price-fixing, which is usually a charge laid against large companies, is a $1-million fine "and-or five years in jail — which would probably be me as the president of the BCMA."

He told the Kamloops Medical Society that the association will stop publishing fee schedules for medical procedures not covered by the provincial health insurance plan and will publish only those fee schedules which are worked out with the provincial government.

Harsher justice demanded

This attitude will probably lead to more government compensation of victims of crimes in the 1980s, the report says. As well, systems will have to be worked out to allow a criminal to repay — with money or labor — his victim.

Although many people profess to believe the criminal justice system should rehabilitate, they don't want rehabilitative tools such as half-way houses in their neighborhoods because they don't want to have anything to do with criminals.

Despite the desire to deal harshly with criminals, most people aren't overly worried about crime in general, the report says.

"Only between one and three per cent of Canadians are fearful of being personally victimized by strangers or of walking in their neighborhood at night," the study says.

This feeling of security appears to be well-founded in statistics.

In Canada there were slightly more than 100 violent crimes — murder, manslaughter, attempted murder, wounding, robbery and rape — committed per 100,000 population in 1977. In the United States the figure was closer to 500.

The reasons for the higher violent crime rate in the United States are not clear, the report says.

"Some suggest this is because the U.S.A. has more restricted employment and social opportunities for minorities, more guns per head, and a more dominant cultural tradition of violence," it adds.

Canadians in general have a great deal of respect for policemen and are satisfied with their performance.

But, the study points out, while the public thinks the police are competent, it does not think they are efficient in solving specific crimes.

Victims particularly often express regret at having called the police because of the time and inconvenience involved in prosecuting the case.

Those who had never had any contact with the police had the "most positive attitudes" towards them.

The proposed law would cover only offences under the Criminal Code and violations of other federal laws. Less serious forms of behavior could be dealt with in child welfare laws if necessary.

The offences of incorrigibility and sexual immorality would disappear. The report says the current law is discriminatory because it makes certain forms of behavior a crime for juveniles, but not for adults.

The government wants to reduce the number of children brought to court by providing other ways of dealing with juvenile problems.

The government proposes abolishing the offence of contributing to juvenile delinquency, and would not let parents be held responsible for illegal acts committed by their children.

Juvenile court proceedings, now held behind closed doors, would be opened to the public, but the media would still be prohibited from publishing the names of juveniles charged with offences.

All that glitters isn't rust

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — When Jacobus Oosthuizen decided to cut up some old rusty water pipes on his farm in the northern Transvaal recently, he literally discovered a gold mine.

For the rust on the pipes had a glitter that turned out to be $250,000 worth of gold dust.

Oosthuizen said Thursday the pipes, which had been purchased from a gold mine without anyone bothering to check them, had been left behind by the farm's previous owner.

Safety first vowed by Trans Mountain

VANCOUVER (CP) — Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. said Thursday it will not proceed with its proposed $600 million plan to transport Alaskan oil to the U.S. midwest if it cannot meet environmental requirements.

"If there were items (regarding the environment) that could not be overcome, we'd stop and not go ahead," the company told a National Energy Board hearing.

Trans Mountain wants a conditional permit to build a pipeline from the U.S. border to Edmonton.

Concurrently, it has applied to U.S. regulatory authorities to build an oil port at Low Point, Wash., on the U.S. side of Juan de Fuca Strait, to receive oil from tankers arriving from Valdez, Alaska.

The oil would be piped from Low Point to Edmonton, then to Chicago.

During the two-week hearing, Trans Mountain has faced a barrage of questions by its competitor, Foothills Oil Pipe Line Ltd., various environmentalists, and Dr. Andrew Thompson, former chairman of the West Coast oil ports inquiry.

Foothills, which temporarily has withdrawn its plan to build a $1.6 billion pipeline, has said it will resubmit its proposal if the board rejects Trans Mountain's plan.

Under its terms of reference, the board cannot ask for marine environmental impact studies, but it has ruled that the subject is relevant.

Chairman R. F. Brooks asked Trans Mountain how it would assess the impact on Canadian waters 80 to 160 kilometres offshore of a spill on the route between Valdez and Juan de Fuca.

Trans Mountain said it would do an analysis based on the trajectory of such an oil spill, and this would include an assessment of the impact on marine life even if the spill didn't wash ashore.

Canadian commercial fishermen are concerned about an oil spill's effects on fish well out at sea, as well as the risk of tankers colliding with fishing boats in the confines of Juan de Fuca Strait.

Trans Mountain said the marine life aspect of the environmental studies it plans if granted the conditional permit include studying plankton, the miniscule life forms that fish feed on.

Pharmacare fraud nets three months

VANCOUVER (CP) — The former owner of three Vancouver drug stores, who earlier pleaded guilty to defrauding the provincial government Pharmacare program of $1,270, was sentenced Thursday to three months in jail.

Shang Kee Lee, 45, charged with fraud by making false claim under the Pharmacare program. The charge followed a one-year RCMP investigation into allegations he charged for prescriptions that were never ordered and the drugs prescribed were never delivered.

Law society sued again

VANCOUVER (UPC) — A second renegade Vancouver lawyer, following close in the footsteps of the first, filed suit in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday against the British Columbia Law Society over its ban on the advertising of fees.

Jack D. James, owner of an avant-garde law practice called the Law Shoppe, said he is claiming unspecified damages and seeking an injunction to stop the law society from proceeding with disciplinary measures against him for advertising his fees in newspapers and on a sign in his office window.

The society cited James earlier this month for "professional misconduct and conduct unbecoming a member of the society" for his advertising of fees, his use of charge cards in his practice and several other actions, said Dennis Olmstead, the society's deputy-secretary.

Law society guidelines prohibit lawyers from advertising their fees although they were changed last year to permit the advertising of specialties and areas of practice.

James could be suspended or disbarred from practice if found guilty of conduct unbecoming in a society hearing set for Oct. 30.

James is the second attorney to take on the society for its advertising rules. North Vancouver lawyer Donald Jabour challenged the guidelines in January 1978 when he advertised in the newspaper the opening of his new legal clinic.

The society, which at the time did not allow any type of advertising, found him guilty of conduct unbecoming and moved to suspend him for six months.

Jabour sued the society and won, with the B.C. Supreme Court ruling that the society did not have the power to stop lawyers from advertising. The society has appealed that ruling to the B.C. Court of Appeal. No date has been set for the case.

James will appear in Supreme Court Chambers Monday to argue for an injunction against the disciplinary proceedings. He is also claiming loss and damages because of the citation and asks that the court declare the society's advertising rules null and void and contrary to the provisions of the federal Combines Investigation Act.

He also alleges the society is conspiring to unduly lessen competition in respect of prices and distribution of legal services.

"Lawyers just don't like competition," he said in an interview Thursday. "So they complain to the Law Society when I advertise."

New HQ site picked for ICBC

The Insurance Corporation of B.C.'s head office is to be moved to a $70-million development on 25 acres of land near the SeaBus terminal in North Vancouver.

Premier Bill Bennett announced Thursday the development will include a marine training institute, stores, restaurants, 300 residential units and a waterfront park.

About 1,100 ICBC employees will move to the new offices from the present head office in Vancouver.

Bennett said the development — to be called Lonsdale Quay — will provide about 2,000 man years of employment during the next five years, Bennett said.

Fostering rate up

The basic maintenance rate for children in foster homes will increase by between $20 and $32 a month per child starting Nov. 1, the human resources ministry said Thursday.

The 5,700 foster children will be getting between $132 and $230, an increase over the current $112 to $230 each month.

Prison terms for six Sons

NELSON (CP) — Six Sons of Freedom Doukhobors convicted of attempted arson last month were sentenced Thursday in county court in this southeastern B.C. community.

Judge K.D. Houghton ordered Nellie Koodain and Helen Kinakin to spend two years less a day in the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre in Burnaby for their part in the May 13 attempt to burn the home of Joe Podivinikoff at Slocan Park, near Nelson.

Pauline Hadikin was sentenced to one year at the centre, her husband, Fred, to two months, and Mollie Stoochnoff to six months.

Alex Legebokoff was given a one-day jail term and placed on probation for one year.

The sentences are believed to be the most severe handed down in recent months. In a case last May, the same judge put on probation eight Freedomites convicted of the same charge.

Sentencing of Tina Jmaiff has been postponed until Nov. 7 for health reaons.

Endako dispute talks under cover

Talks aimed at ending the bitter eight-month labor dispute at Placer Development's Endako molybdenum mine near Fraser Lake, B.C., were adjourned for the third day Thursday with none of the parties involved disclosing what progress had been made.

Ken Albertini, who is mediating talks involving the company and the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, said the talks will resume today at provincial mediation offices in Burnaby.

Labor Minister Allan Williams, who started talks with the two sides Tuesday, was not involved in Thursday's session.

Williams first became involved in the dispute last June, saying he was concerned about violence on the picket line and appointing Kelowna lawyer Hugh Ladner to inquire into the dispute.

MD welcomes suit in 'useless' suicide

An angry doctor said Thursday in Vancouver he welcomes any legal action against him by the provincial human resources ministry over his remarks about its handling of a case involving a patient who committed suicide.

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy had said she is investigating Dr. John Scarfo's claims that her department was partly to blame in the suicide of Camilla Simonetto.

Simonetto, who hanged herself in a barn in nearby Surrey Oct. 21, was facing a charge of attempted murder following an incident last month in which she jumped into a well with her four-month-old infant. She was suffering post-partum depression.

After mother and child were rescued, the baby was returned to the father's care while Simonetto spent a few days at a mental hospital before Scarfo arranged for a transfer to a hospital in Surrey.

"She progressed well and by Oct. 5 I said she was safe and ready for release," said Scarfo.

He said he was then told by human resources officials they would take the child into their care if the mother was released from hospital. The child was taken into the ministry's care Oct. 5 and released back to the father the next day.

Meanwhile, Scarfo said, he and social workers at the Surrey hospital worked out a plan subsequently formalized in Family Court that would allow the infant to remain with the father as long as the mother remained in hospital under Scarfo's care. The case was set aside for two weeks for further review.

On Oct. 19, Scarfo said, the woman slipped out of the hospital and was not seen again until her body was found.

"They (human resources) should never have picked up that child," Scarfo said. "They should never have taken it into their care for even one night."

He said the woman was led to suicide by the attempted murder charge and her long stay in hospital.

"I'm so angry about this," he said. "It's a completely useless loss of a beautiful person. It need not have happened.

John Noble, deputy-minister of human resources, said it was the combined decision of the court and the ministry that the child could remain at home as long as the mother stayed in hospital.

"We appreciate Dr. Scarfo's concern for the mother, but we had to exercise our responsibility under the Protection of Children Act. The staff had to make a decision — leave the child at home or remove it."

Downtown housing

Victoria city council unanimously endorsed last night a planning department study urging massive residential development in downtown Victoria. The study suggests that housing units for about 6,000 people should be built in the area bounded by Pandora, Cook, Fort and Blanshard.

Many details remain to be worked out, but the general concept is a good one. It has innumerable advantages — for the residents of the area, for the city itself, and even for the whole Greater Victoria region.

Downtown housing is not especially suitable for families, but the city planning department believes the new residential developments should be geared mainly towards the retired and towards young singles and couples. For many of them, downtown would be a delightful place to live. They would be handy to shopping and to the many cultural amenities of downtown. Many of them would be close enough to their jobs that they could walk to work. In these days of rapidly increasing gasoline costs, this could be a big money-saver.

Moreover, since virtually all the housing will be high-density apartments and townhouses, it will be cheap enough for many young couples and senior citizens to afford. As interest rates skyrocket, it becomes increasingly difficult for young people to gather the resources to buy a single-family home. Condominiums or townhouses, however, might be within their price range. Likewise, the costs of renting a downtown apartment will be less for the senior citizens than the costs of renting a detached house.

For the city, downtown housing has at least three advantages. The first is that it will give a boost to the preservation of downtown. The economic base of a downtown almost solely dependent on the whims of a seasonal tourist industry would be greatly enhanced by a resident community of 6,000 persons who would be much more likely to shop and eat downtown than to travel to the suburban shopping malls to spend their money.

The second advantage is that the new developments will doubtless improve the eastern downtown area. Residential development with appropriate open spaces and walkways has the potential to be much more attractive than acres of used carlots and rundown commercial buildings.

The third is that the development of apartments and townhouses in this area will take some of the pressure off those neighborhoods that the city wants, quite properly, to preserve as family housing — James Bay, Fernwood, Fairfield. As the population of Victoria grows, the need for some high-density development also grows. Far better that it be met in an area which cannot be converted to good family housing than in one where family housing will be lost to accommodate it.

It is this third advantage that has some spillover effect for the rest of the Capital Region. Provision of new housing for 6,000 people downtown should reduce the pressure to gobble up agricultural land, open spaces, and land outside Saanich's urban containment boundary for new housing to meet the region's growing population.

Care must certainly be taken in furthering this development. Provision of lots of open space and good building design are a must. This downtown development need not, and should not, look anything like Vancouver's West End when it is finished.

Properly built and supervised, however, it has the potential to be of great benefit to all Victorians — not just those who choose to live there.

No tricky shots

The Clark government is to be applauded for fulfilling the hollow promises of the former Liberal regime. A freedom of information bill has been introduced in the House of Commons and opposition parties have agreed to support it. It could be a reality by Christmas.

But while the government is on the eve of opening many of its darkest chasms, it is somewhat ironic that certain activities will remain outside the public's eye.

Press photographers will join their television peers in the House on an experimental basis. They had been clamoring for the right ever since TV cameras were admitted two years ago. However, there's going to be some rather tight cropping.

Before any photos are published, House leaders and caucuses will have the right of veto. It follows the general guidelines set up for television cameramen which banned reaction shots. Only the MPs speaking are allowed into television viewers' homes.

The public may be able to get its hands on volumes of information previously outside their grasp, but never will they have a pin-up of their local MP dozing or doing his crossword puzzles in the House of Commons.

RICHARD GWYN

Gaining on Liberal ground

OTTAWA — Among the differences between this Parliament and the last that any political groupie who comes often to the public galleries would notice instantly, such as the six, gun-metal chandeliers in place of the TV kleig lights and the lack of a rose in Pierre Trudeau's lapel, is the change, from silver and grey to blonde, brown and black, in the hair color of the MPs in the far left corner.

These corner lefties are the New Democrats. There are more of them than before — 26 compared to 16 — and among the band of brothers now are two sisters.

Far more noticeable than the increase in the numbers of New Democrats, is the decrease in their age. In the last Parliament, their mean age was 52. Three — Tommy Douglas, Andrew Brewin and Stanley Knowles — were septuagenarians.

Younger team

Their mean age now, easily the youngest of the party, is 37. Knowles is still there. First elected in 1942, he's no longer so much a Member of Parliament as a Parliamentary icon.

Behind him, sit the kids: Bill Blaikie, 27; Svend Robinson, 27; Ronse Faour, 27; Jim Fulton, 28; Peter Ittinuar, 29. Also Bob Rae, 31: Terry Sergeant, 32; Rod Murphy, 32; Lorne Nystrom, 33; Simon de Jong, 35; Ian Waddell, 36. Among them, only Nystrom has been here for longer than a year.

"Yes, I was depressed on election night at what happened to us," party leader Ed Broadbent, a couple of flecks of grey revealing his own advanced age of 43, remarked in an interview. "Then I looked over the list of who we'd got elected, and I've been on a high ever since."

In its interminable trudge march to power, the NDP, in the last election, took at best a half step forward and half-a-dozen sideways. Despite every advantage, from all the money it could use to all the support the Canadian Labor Congress could offer, the NDP won only a few more votes (18 per cent) and a few more seats (less, in fact, than in 1972-74).

Strong in the west (the NDP could win the November byelection in Prince Albert) and stronger in the east (the party should do well, but not well enough in the byelection in Newfoundland), the NDP failed where success matters most — in Ontario. It failed as well to win a balance of power in the new Parliament.

ED BROADBENT
. . .happy with party's youth

Gallup brought Broadbent his first, post-election good news. Summer polls showed that most Canadians like Broadbent the most (35 per cent, against 28 per cent for Joe Clark and 17 per cent for Trudeau) even if they hadn't liked him enough during the election to vote for him.

The Liberals provided the next good news. Unaccustomed to being in oppostion, and uncertain whether Trudeau would stay or go, the Liberals stayed silent through the summer. Broadbent, who accepts the theory that if the NDP ever is to come up the Liberals must come down, used the time to carry out what he calls "a pre-emptive strike" on the issue of privatizing PetroCanada. Effectively he stole from the Liberals, who created the corporation, their own issue.

In Parliament today, still uncertain where they and their leaders ought to go, the Liberals as yet are firing only ranging shots at side, although important, issues such as tanker traffic off the west coast. The shots fired at Canada's economic centre — inflation, interest rates, excess profits, foreign ownership — are those coming from the Commons' far left corner.

Broadbent's target is Middle Canada, which, he is convinced, while conservative about social issues is ready to be progressive about economic issues. "Rather than moving to the middle ourselves," says Broadbent, "we're out to persuade the people in the middle to move to our side."

To persuade the middle to move, Broadbent proposes what he calls, "practical social democracy". Typically, in contrast to the Corporate Welfare Bums slogan of his predecessor David Lewis, Broadbent's slogan is "tax fairness".

Rather than attacking corporate profits in general, Broadbent and his financial critic Rae, go after particular excess profts, such as those of the oil companies and the banks. "To attack corporate profits such would be intellectually dishonest," says Broadbent. "And impractical, because most Canadians work for corporations and depend upon their profits for their incomes."

Centre battle

In his battle for the middle, Broadbent has, for the first time, a squad of spear-carriers. Rae and Faour, stars from the last Parliament. Waddell, former counsel for Judge Thomas Berger's commission into the arctic gas pipeline. Pauline Jewitt, former president of Simon Fraser University. Robinson, already as cool as a veteran as he challenges Solicitor-General Allan Lawrence about a possible conflict of interest in his handling of a combines investigation.

And Blaikie. He's a big, bearded, United Church minister from Winnipeg. His maiden speech probably was the most eloquent yet given in this Parliament. "We are the true conservatives," said Blaikie. "We are the ones who would intervene to conserve what is valuable and good about Canadian life, rather than abandoning it to the whim and self-interest of the economically powerful in the name of a specious freedom."

An example, this, of one of Broadbent's spear-carriers pointing his weapon right at the middle. An example, as well, of how the most interesting debates in this Parliament aren't those between government and opposition but those between the bunch down in the left-hand corner and the Liberals next door to them.

Evidence lacking

There is growing public interest in the fate of unborn babies as a result of a coroner's inquest and a court case regarding two Victoria babies. Regardless of the court's decision, each individual must make up their own mind regarding the sanctity of a babies life. Those private decisions can be made from legal and from scientific evidence. Philosophical and religious arguments do not need to be referred to.

There are two incontrovertible facts.

1. There are no studies that show abortion is therapeutic.
2. There is increasing evidence that the long term effects of abortions are harmful to women.

There are no proper medical studies to show that abortion is therapeutic in any group (retarded, psychotic) at any age. Unless I missed something, there is nothing in medical literature (approximately 1,400 references) providing evidence that abortion is therapeutic. Yet physicians keep calling it therapeutic. This is a sad inconsistency because physicians wouldn't call any operative proceedure therapeutic or use it, unless there was good evidence that it did some good for patients.

There is increasing evidence that the long term effects on women who are aborted is harmful. WHO studies show higher rates of spontaneous miscarriage, premature births of babies, tubal pregnancies and difficult deliveries. Yet many physicians doing abortions are not informing women of these dangers. This is another sad inconsistency because every other operative proceedure requires a careful description to the patient before obtaining a informed consent.

The progressive dehumanization of a small voiceless and dependent children is not easy to stop but, it must. Germany learned too late what happens if you begin calling people objects "useless eaters". That is why in 1976 the Constitutional Court of Germany ruled against a liberal abortion law. It is not possible to begin calling unborn babies "fetus" or "conceptus" without dehumanizing infants and progressively dehumanizing all people.

After being responsible for the death of 75,000 unborn children, Dr. Bernard Natheson, founder of NARAL (National Assocation for the Repeal of Abortion Laws) has reputiated what he has done and appeals to the North Americans, asking them to discard their utilitarian approach to life and respect each and every life. (Aborting America," Doubleday, 1979).

Each person must make a decision how they will regard the lives of their little unborn neighbours. The historical, scientific and legal evidence is overwhelming in favor of regarding each unborn child as a human with full rights. — Dr. Philip G. Ney. 1958 Fort Street.

Leave them be

I am seriously disturbed by an offer to accommodate private oil companies by offering to allow them to use DND property in Colwood for the storage of petroleum products.

We are aware that the concerns of the navy with regard to traffic in Esquimalt Harbour are completely ignored in peace time. Large bulk carriers are no longer inspected for grain loading in Royal Roads but are allowed into Esquimalt Harbour to please the inspectors, constituting a serious obstacle to moving traffic. Senior Officers have told us that, inasmuch as their objections to this problem are not considered in Ottawa, what hope is there that their objections to additional regular tanker traffic will be heard?

Would this civilian dependancy on supplies stored on DND property be acceptable in case of hostilities? One expects more consideration from a minister with a military background for these aspects of the problem.

Those of us who live around Esquimalt Harbor are concerned about the pollution of the harbor. The navy oil facility already pollutes the waters. Last Friday a film of oil was visible in front of our home. The prospect of another 350 potential oil spills a year is absolutely unacceptable to us. Aside from any other objections to oil pollution I remind him that the provincial portion of the harbor is a wild life reserve.

I realise that certain business interests in Victoria have their eyes on the profit potential of the land now occupied by the tank farm in Victoria Harbour and they, no doubt, are pressing him as the Victoria MP to further their cause. But I can see no justification for giving the oil companies a legitimate reason to raise prices by putting them to great expense to re-establish elsewhere, especially in view of the PC's policy of escalating oil prices. These tanks are on the industrial reserve. They are isolated sufficiently to not be a danger to the rest of Victoria. The owners can be required to bring them up to a reasonable, modern fire safety standard and to screen them suitably so that they will be aesthetically acceptable.

The tank farm should remain where it is. The economics of the situation, both from the standpoint of Victoria's industrial tax base and needless expense to the oil companies, demand it. None will gain from the proposed move but the money hungry developers who are anxious to get hold of this waterfront property.

I agree that we do not want to lose another industrial employer from Victoria. The best way to keep them is to leave the tanks where they are. — J. C. Sutherland, 549 View Royal Avenue.

Something unique?

Macdonalds is moving downtown. Now that the city and other businesses have revitalized the core, I guess the time is ripe. The old Saba's store is gutted and the sign is on the hoardings. 'We do it all for you'.

But what will they do for the look of the city and that block on Douglas in particular? Will the fast food outlet blend in with the art deco facade of Marks and Spencers and the elegant and freshly painted Eatons main store? Will the corporation be at pains to create something unique to Victoria, something in keeping with her architectural traditions? Does City Hall or the Advisory Design Panel have any influence over the appearance of a new store front or is the Macdonalds Corporation in complete design control? Will Victoria get another 'chain' exterior in the bland and boring tradition of Shoppers Drug Mart, B.C. Sound, and Coles Book People?

For the answer to these and other questions, we will have to wait until the hoarding comes tumbling down. — Thomas R. Palfrey, 941 Meares Street.

Farms, forests hurt

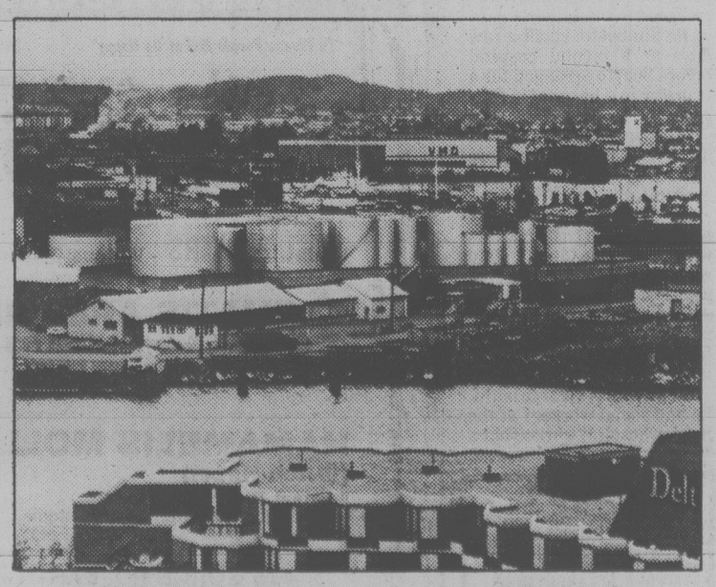
As a citizen of Canada and a resident of B.C. for nearly 10 years I want you to know how disappointed and angry I am at the cabinet's circumvention of the B.C. Land Commission and the totally irresponsible decision of government to allow the withdrawal of B.C. farm land, especially in the Fraser Valley (and to some extent in other areas) from the agricultural land reserve.

It is an act of social indifference, irresponsibility to future generations of Canadians and contributes to the loss of a traditional way of life for some Canadians. It is clearly evident that the Social Credit government is in sympathy with the land speculators and developers in this province (and even from outside the province and country in some cases). Don't they know that something less than three per cent of B.C. is suited to agriculture and that Canada has to import something near half its food? We should be expanding agricultural production of our few good farm lands, not handing it over to developers and speculators. There are plenty of other suitable lands near the land reserve which are suitable for industrial parks, housing, etc.

A second point. I am sick of the ruination of our forest reserves by over-logging, logging in parks, and the lack of proper reforestation procedures in this province. The government and the forest industry appear to be concerned only about the short term economic gain and not interested in the long-term effects. I was in the visitor's gallery during the introduction and debate on the present forestry legislation. I have talked with people in the Forest Service. I have also compared the type of forestry legislation in Oregon and Washington with that in B.C. and we are way behind the times in forest management.

The government gives the public the appearance of arrogance, lack of social concern, and lack of foresight into the future needs of this province. Dirty tricks aside (any government can get into that kind of mess)— Please! you are in a position of great influence. Govern for the long-term good of B.C., not for the interests of land speculators and developers. Protect our environment. Pass legislation to require forest related industries to behave responsibly as good corporate citizens.

The damage being done in these areas is, in some cases, irreversible.— Roger L. Doney, 8801 Moresby Park Terrace, Sidney.



Moving tank farm to Esquimalt presents a pollution hazard.

The Golden Eagle

I can't remember when I saw my first Golden Eagle. Not that these great birds don't have a profound effect on me every time I do see one, it's just that that first meeting goes so far back it is now lost in the passing of time.

I do remember, though, that as a boy I often dreamed of Golden Eagles and of the vast open spaces that are their home, and of the day when I might find myself there.

Well, as with so many boyhood dreams, my meeting with Golden Eagles on their home ground never came true. I've had to settle for the occasional, and usually unexpected, encounters that really are the spice of a birdwatcher's life.

In recent years these occasional and unexpected encounters have become less occasional and more expected, mainly because of moving from southern Manitoba — where Golden Eagles are rare — to southern Vancouver Island, where Golden Eagles have been re-writing the book on Golden Eagles.

It seems that in the past Golden Eagles were probably as scarce here as in southern Manitoba, but early in the 1970s all this changed. Today, while you're not likely to see a Golden Eagle from your dining-room window, a resident of southern Vancouver Island has only to spend a little time in one of the right places and a Golden Eagle is pretty sure to turn up.

What caused this change is still largely an open question. There is strong support for the idea that rabbits of a couple of kinds — which have recently become much more common hereabouts — are responsible for the regular appearance of Golden Eagles today. Rabbits are staple fare for Golden Eagles.

On the other hand, the country has changed a lot since the Europeans arrived here — much less forest and more open country, and Golden Eagles like open country.

Whatever the reason, it isn't too hard to see a Golden Eagle on southern Vancouver Island these days — and last Saturday morning was one of "these days."

I was up at Island View Beach with a party of folks trying to get a handle on how to identify birds when a rather large, dark bird hove into view over Cordova Channel. I suspected eagle even before I got the glasses on to the bird. The powerful thrust of the bird's ponderous wings — and its size — told me that. But I wasn't quite prepared for what the glasses revealed when they did find the bird.

Instead of the plain dark shape of a young Bald Eagle — which I had expected — there was a flash of white in each wing of the bird, and a white tail with a broad dark band across its tip. It was a Golden Eagle — a bird of the year!

Well, whenever I'm out with a group of people and birdwatching is our aim, I'm usually frustrated when drawing their attention to something I find. The "find" usually doesn't stay around long enough for anybody else to see it.

But there were no frustrations this time. I had time to call out "Eagle" and time to draw everybody's attention to the bird, and even time to point out what made the bird a Golden Eagle. Not only did the bird give us all a chance to check it out but, after leaving briefly, it came back and — against a deep blue sky — circled slowly right above us.

It was about that time that my boyhood memories began to flood back. Pictures of Allan Brooks' paintings of Golden Eagles, visions of Golden Eagles in the Badlands of South Dakota, aven the memory of one that passed overhead last year while I was waiting for a bus in Colwood — all passed through my mind. But that most important memory of all — of my first Golden Eagle — still evaded me.

About that time, too, I realized that, for most of the people there, this was their first Golden Eagle. Would they have as much trouble remembering theevent as I do my first Golden Eagle? I thought not.

FEIFFER

He laughed his way into exile

By DAVID LAMB

LONDON — James Mancham sat at his usual corner table, sipping white wine with a friend and saying, yes, he hoped to go home again one day. But he had no regrets. He had fared better than most deposed presidents of African nations.

"Look at it this way," he said, "I'm alive. That's more than a lot of ex-presidents in Africa can say. Besides that, everyone had fun when I was president. How many ex-presidents can say that?"

For 11 months and seven days James Mancham — "call me Jimmy" — ruled the Seychelles, an island republic in the Indian Ocean, with a carefree innocence that delighted his supporters and confounded his critics. Life was a party and Mancham was the host. He called his political credo "the Singing Philosophy" — just be happy, as a person or as a nation.

A bachelor, Mancham read love letters from women at cabinet meetings and jet-setted around the world in the company of models and actresses. When he was at home, the Statehouse echoed with laughter and song until dawn. When the disc jockey at the government radio station overslept one morning, Mancham slipped into shorts and sneakers, drove to the station and spent two hours reading the news, reciting poetry he had written and playing records.

The good life ended abruptly on June 5, 1977. While Mancham was in London, his government was overthrown by his prime minister, Albert Rene, whom Mancham had defeated in three elections. All Rene needed to take over the government and the peaceful cluster of islands (population 60,000) was 40 soldiers trained in and supported by Tanzania.

"Two people from the outside — I can't tell you where they were from — came to me just before the coup and said that if I didn't do Rene in, he was going to do me in," Mancham, 40, recalled the other day over lunch.

"I said, 'What do you mean — do Rene in?' And they said I had to kill him if I wanted to stay in power. That I couldn't do. I never even held a political prisoner. Maybe that was my weakness, because if you're going to be a president in Africa, you've got to be ruthless to survive."

In exile, Mancham, the son of a wealthy Seychelles businessman, has lost none of his fondness for the good life. He lives in a London penthouse, has a chauffeur, has written a book about the islands of the world and travels often. But as an ex-president, he has some outspoken views on Africa and the West that he would not have volunteered three years ago.

"There are some shameful things going on in Africa," he said. "The continent is suffering from very mediocre leadership. Everywhere you look in Africa, there are guns and unhappy people. The promises of independence have been a fake in most countries, and I can tell you this: a lot of people in Africa preferred the colonial days. They had more freedom.

"All the shouting about neocolonialism and imperialism is just silly jargon, an excuse to divert attention from national shortcomings. Africa devotes so much energy to South Africa and Rhodesia that it forgets that the real problems are right there on its own doorstep."

Mancham, though staunchly pro-Western, said that any African country would be foolish to count on the United States for support, as he did. He said that shortly after the Seychelles gained independence from Britain in 1976, he was visited by CIA agents from the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya.

"They came in and said I was vulnerable, and I agreed," Mancham recalled. "We had no army in the Seychelles and we were in a strategic location in the Indian Ocean. We also had a U.S. satellite tracking station (where 132 Americans, mostly civilians worked), so naturally the Russians were interested in us.

"I signed an agreement in which the CIA was going to train some sort of paramilitary force for me and help set up an intelligence network. Then the CIA got involved in all that controversy in the U.S. media at home and there was the presidential election. Every time I called the CIA in Nairobi, they'd tell me just to sit tight. The funds hadn't been allocated yet.

"So here I was, a de facto CIA agent myself, someone who believed in democracy and Western values, and all the CIA ever did was to train a couple of bodyguards for me. They let a friend down. They left me with a U.S. tracking station but no insurance."

Under Rene, the Seychelles have slipped out of the Western sphere of influence and pursued a nonaligned policy, though Rene has said he will honor a 10-year agreement covering the tracking station. The agreement will not expire until 1986.

The government has not interfered with the Mancham family's business interests in the islands. For his part, Mancham has said he will not attempt to return to power by violent means.

"I suppose you could say I was naive in a way," Mancham said. "I didn't believe in violence. I didn't believe in having people shot or put in jail. I didn't believe in pomp and ceremony or being one person in public and another in private.

"In Africa those beliefs can cost you your job, sometimes your life. So you can count me as one of the lucky ones. I'm alive and I'm still having fun."

A waste of young life

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Life was just getting under way for Dolly Gallant when it ended in a laneway — blown away at 14 with a whiff of freon gas from a can of cooking spray.

The waste of life is horrifying enough to contemplate, but the horror deepens the closer one gets to the attitudes, habits, and desensitized emotions of the group to which she belonged. Sniffing one noxious substance or another appears to be commonplace in the neighborhood, and those who participate seem astonishingly well equipped to absorb the death of one of their number without any great show of distress.

They may, of course, turn away from Pam cooking spray, which Dolly Gallant was using. The incident would, as one of her friends said, "turn the kids against it. There's no point in doing it if you're go to die from it at 14." Maybe they will turn to another deadly vapor — glue, or paint thinners. But among Dolly's friends at least, there is no sign of any great rush away from the general lunacy of risking annihilation for inhalation.

Another of Dolly's friends outlined the group's cruel dilemma: "They won't sell beer or drugs at school, so what else can we do?"

What else can they do? It's a question that could be answered at considerable length. There was a time — and there are cultures today — in which the need of a 14-year-old for stimulants to make life worth living would have been treated as the absurdity it is. By what series of blunders did society arrive at its present predicament — one in which some of our young apparently place little value on their own lives, or have lost the capacity to assess risk?

It is also a society in which, if we are to believe another report from Dolly's circle of friends, a teen-ager can introduce a highly dangerous substance, offer it to others in the area, and punch them if they don't take it. If the group lacks the wisdom or guts to handle tiny dictators, how will it ever cope with the big ones?

To kiss or not to kiss . . .

By GARY LAUTENS

The most difficult part of any party or social gathering for me comes right at the end.

You know, you're standing in the hallway, saying goodnight to guests and friends, and you have to come up with a quick decision:

To kiss or not to kiss.

I am very bad when it comes to social kissing. I am not what you would call a natural kisser.

For example, my three children are now 19, 17 and 14 years of age and I have never kissed any one of them on the lips.

When they were babies, they got about 800,000 kisses a day — on their foreheads, on their noses, on the bottoms of their feet, on the tops of their heads, well, any part that happened to pop up when I was into my kissing pattern.

But never on the mouth.

And I'm still like that today.

I kiss Stephen, Jane and Richard regularly, big mush, but never in front of their friends or under their noses. It just isn't comfortable for me.

I worry about the usual things — nasty germs, onion breath from the dinner Big Mac, colliding teeth that could chip, having them whip up the dog at the last minute and discovering instead of a kiss I'm getting a juicy liver lick, etc.

But mostly, and here the Methodist in me comes out of the closet, I consider lip-kissing pretty personal stuff. It's the kind of thing you do in the back seat of the 1971 Chevelle at the drive-in, not among relatives, friends or dinner guests.

Oh, how I envy people who treat life like one long buss stop. They can pucker at the drop of a cocktail party invitation, kiss on either side of their mouths, and never lose the thread of the conversation.

Not me.

You are looking at the original Bashful, or perhaps Dopey, in the old kissing game. The only time I smack my lips after dinner is if there's whipped cream on the dessert.

Even my wife likes to tell the story about how we dated several times before I made any move to kiss her. In fact, she was beginning to wonder if there was something wrong with Mr. Right.

The truth is, I had the inclination, but I wanted to make absolutely sure she was going to kiss back and not haul off and plant her fist in the middle of my kissing apparatus.

In other words, when it comes to kissing, I'm no gambler. I talk a better game than I play.

Which may explain the fumbling I go through every time we say goodnight to dinner guests at our front door.

With the men, no sweat.

A hearty handshake, maybe even a squeeze on the shoulder if I know him well enough, and a promise to get in touch soon.

But the women?

That's another matter.

Some offer their cheek and that's a relieving cue to deliver the polite peck; some kiss their own fingers and sort of flutter the greeting off in your general direction; some gather you in for a hug and drape you over a shoulder as if to burp you.

Others just purse their lips and that's your signal to lean over and sort of kiss them, but not really.

It's very difficult to know what to do and it always makes me nervous to decide what kind of lip service is expected of me.

I don't want to be bold, but I don't want to be regarded either as an old bluestocking who needs new batteries for his osculator.

Whoever invented social kissing should have written a rule book for those of us who don't yet quite have the hang of it.

No more tankers: City

Two mayoralty candidates vied at Thursday night's city council meeting to see who had the best credentials as environmentalist.

At the same time council was left somewhat confused about the effects of its stand against oil tankers.

Council passed unanimously a motion which opposed further increase in the volume of oil and tanker traffic in Juan de Fuca Strait, and also condemned any larger tankers than are used now.

But Ald. Murray Glazier and John Hayes, who proposed the motion, differed on the question of safety. Glazier said the current proposal to build an oilport on the other side of the strait west of Port Angeles would be 25 per cent safer.

Hayes replied that Victorians, simply on emotional grounds, ought to be opposed to more oil and larger tankers.

The debate left the impression that council, while abhorring any increase in tankers, condoned the present system where large tankers run a more hazardous route through the San Juan Islands and narrow Rosario Strait.

Glazier wanted council to oppose any and all oil tanker traffic farther than the proposed oilport at Low Point, Wash. but Hayes' motion was upheld.

"Any accident and subsequent oil spill would have disastrous and long-term effects on our natural coastline, beaches and marine life," said the motion, which is to be telegraphed to the National Energy Board oilport hearings.

"For our residents and tourist industry alike, any proposal to increase tanker traffic in the strait is completely unacceptable," it said.

Glazier noted that 800,000 barrels a day would be delivered by the new plan, an increase from the 300,000 barrels now going to Cherry Point. But this would end under the Trans-Mountain scheme.

Glazier said a federal study calculated a 25 per cent lower risk of spills using Low Point rather than Cherry Point.

Hayes said talk of percentages doesn't take into account factors like the weather or if the captain had been drinking.

"Strictly on an emotional basis we should be opposed to any increase in oil or larger tankers."

Infantry group to meet

More than 100 delegates from across Canada are in Victoria for the 67th annual meeting of the Canadian Infantry Association today and Saturday at Royal Roads Military College.

The national president is Col. R.D. Horncastle of Fredericton, N.B.

Among those attending are Lt.-Gen. Jacques Chouinard of Montreal, Colonel Commandant of Infantry and Brig.-Gen. D.J. Anderson of Vancouver, chairman of the Conference of Defence Associations.

Detention home talks remain deadlocked

The deadlock remains between the four core municipalities which own the Juvenile Detention Home on Pembroke and the provincial government which plans to turn it into a prison-like centre where up to 10 youths would serve sentences as long as two years.

Victoria city council Thursday night received a report from the family court committee, composed of professionals and alderman from the city, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt who supervise the use of the JDH, which said it is not "a healthy environment for the complete rehabilitation of young offenders, many with emotional problems."

Drafted by chairman Jocelyn Gifford, the report said that despite the recent extensive renovations, "the cell blocks still retain their earlier depressing character.

"The two day rooms remain unchanged and the exercise yard has had its walls heightened to 16 feet and its asphalt surface replaced with raw concrete."

She said the committee recognizes the difficulties facing the staff of the detention home in having to cope with juveniles remanded there after court appearances, and thus is willing to extend the present eight-day limit to 30 days.

The committee also wants assurances that only Vancouver Island juveniles will be housed there.

Ald. Robin Blencoe told council the representative of the B.C. Buildings Corp. negotiating to buy the JDH for the attorney-general's ministry said that these conditions were unacceptable.

Council held back from endorsing the report entirely, but urged that the A-G be asked to consider the committee's requests in the next round of negotiations over the purchase.

Sinclair tosses hat in civic ring

Professional engineer and former jet pilot Ken Sinclair said Thursday he has entered the race for alderman in the Nov. 17 Victoria civic elections.

Sinclair, 43, has his own firm, Westland Consultants Ltd., which has been in business here for eight years.

A graduate of Royal Roads, he was a jet pilot instructor with the Royal Canadian Air Force in the early 1960s and studied engineering at UBC and MIT in Boston.

He said in a press release his business and professional background could help improve the city's operating efficiency.

"We should all be working for lower taxes for city home and property owners. I also believe that we have to insist on excellence in new projects to protect tomorrow's heritage and work for an even better beautification program."

His campaign platform includes a demand that the staff of the Capital Regional District submit to a program to define their functions, accountability and responsibility.

There should be improved communications and relations with the neighborhood groups and citizens should have freer access to city hall records and information.

Senior citizens' centres should continue to get city funding while the handicapped should receive adequate transportation services at non-discriminatory rates.

Bowcott making 2nd Saanich try

A fifth candidate has entered the race for alderman in Saanich.

Robert Bowcott, 45, of 1898 Hillcrest, filed nomination papers Thursday.

Bowcott, a self-employed dealer in pleasure boats and a life-long Saanich resident, joins incumbent alderman Geoff Vantreight, former alderman Ian Cass, Hal Knight, and Jock MacGregor in vying for the four council seats open in the Nov. 17 election.

Bowcott is making his second bid for council. He ran last year and received 2,400 votes, placing him seventh out of nine candidates.

His main objective, if elected, is to form a committee of representatives of the 11 ratepayers' groups in the municipality to meet a committee of council once a month to discuss issues.

Demolition rescinded

The city rescinded a demolition order Thursday for a house at 1528 Camosun in Fernwood but demanded that the owners remove the plywood covering the windows and have them reglazed within 60 days.

The vacant house, which had a fire in 1977, has been a thorn in the city's side ever since. Originally, council ordered it repaired or demolished because its dilapidated condition made it a public nuisance.

A report to council by city solicitor Jakob de Villiers said that the property has been improved somewhat, as an "old shack of a garage" has been demolished.

Only cars beat out pot on U.S. list of imports

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Trafficking in marijuana has reached the point in the U.S. where the drug is second only to cars as that country's largest import.

So much money is involved, says the RCMP's chief drug investigator in B.C., that trafficking is seriously affecting the balance of payments of both the U.S. and Canada.

"Huge sums of money are reaching numbered bank accounts in Grand Cayman, Grenada and Switzerland," Inspector Dave Staples said Thursday.

Marijuana trafficking is yielding larger windfall profits for major criminal organizations than any other drug being peddled in Canada, he told a Victoria Rotary luncheon at the Empress.

Staples said for every dollar spent on heroin, five are spent on marijuana and its derivatives including hashish and liquid hashish.

The Co-Ordinated Law Enforcement Unit estimates the annual heroin trade in B.C. at about $250 million.

Based on that figure, trafficking in marijuana is netting criminals well over $1 billion a year, he says.

Staples said: "What we are dealing with are very powerful and very sophisticated criminal organizations. Whether the importation is heroin or so-called soft drugs, we are finding the same people are engaged in bringing both substances into the country."

Staples said most of the marijuana comes from Colombia where the drug has replaced coffee as the country's most important export.

He said the variety of methods used to smuggle drugs into Canada is only limited by the imagination of the traffickers themselves.

Money is no object. They buy whatever is needed to do the job — cars, campers, boats, airplanes, even deep sea freighters.

Staples said investigators have found drugs cached in hollowed-out soles of shoes, in false bottom suitcases, under floor boards of cars and behind side panels of vans. One smuggler tried to bring in liquid hashish stored in shampoo and suntan lotion bottles.

Another was found bringing in heroin concealed in tea bags tucked away in his suitcase. And recently in Chilliwack drug officers discovered a cache of cocaine in a hollowed-out crucifix!

"It just goes to show nothing is sacred," Staples said.

Staples said because of the pressure U.S. authorities are putting on operations in the Caribbean, smugglers are forced into opening up new routes, particularly on the west coast.

Staples said smuggling operations have become so sophisticated they continue to operate even though the authorities are fully aware of what is going on.

He said the profits are enormous. He knows of one trafficker who recently invested $1.5 million in real estate in B.C.

"Here we have groups of people bringing marijuana and cocaine into the country and willing to violate our laws for their own personal gain.

"That has nothing to do with the rights or wrongs of the drug laws."

He said there is only one weapon left in the policeman's arsenal which has had any kind of salutory effect on drug smuggling — the law on drug importation.

At present, it sets a minimum seven years imprisonment on conviction.

Staples said drug officers are looking to Parliament for a re-affirmation of the laws for both use of drugs and trafficking.

"We are in limbo in the enforcement area at present," he told the Rotarians.

"There is a great deal of frustration about the impact we're making. We only hope that soon a firm course will be set for us."

In an interview later Staples said he feels the drug laws are fair and just and adequate.

What is needed, he said, is reassurance from the legislators that they believe the same, but also a vote of confidence from them that, in the wake of the McDonald inquiry, the police are still doing the job the law says they should be doing.

U.S. mail draw illegal in B.C.

An American puzzle competition being mailed to B.C. residents has been declared illegal by the provincial Lotteries Branch.

And the branch has now asked the post office not to deliver the competition material being sent by American Gift House in Las Vegas.

The material includes a glossy-print brochure pushing what the company calls its "Easy Numbers Contest" together with an entry blank.

The contest offers a grand prize of $19,790 and 790 other prizes all worth a total of $100,000.

Contestants are asked to complete three simple puzzles and then enter their names in one of three categories depending on how much they want to pay — $3, $5, or $7 — in American funds, only.

The brochure says "exciting suprise gifts" will be sent free to everyone who enters. The gifts include four choices of cheap jewelry, a small plant and a plastic memo pad.

Contestants who pay $7 have their choice of three, those paying $5 may chose two and the $3 contestant gets just one.

Prizes will be drawn at the completion of the contest which the brochure says will be sometime in October, 1980.

Victoria Better Business Bureau manager Denny Ryan said he became aware of the scheme early this month when a housewife in Oak Bay sent him a contest entry form she got in her mail and wondered if it was legal in B.C.

Ryan said he turned the matter over to the lotteries branch.

On Thursday the branch handed down its verdict. In a letter to Ryan, the branch said the contest contravenes the lottery regulations and Criminal Code and is illegal.

Ryan said he has no idea how many persons have received entry forms.

But those that have and haven't yet entered should throw the forms away, he suggests.

Nothing much can be done now for people who have entered.

But Ryan doesn't offer much hope any will emerge a winner.

Fort shop robbed

City police believe a thief or thieves who broke into Island Blue Print, 905 Fort, Thursday night may have slipped away while an officer was radioing for assistance.

An officer patrolling in the area at 11 p.m. discovered a window in the front door of the store had been smashed.

He got out to investigate and then went to his car to call for reinforcements.

When he returned, he noticed a door in the back of the store had been opened during his absence.

Between $30 to $40 left in a cash register was missing when store employees arrived to take inventory.

Vancouver hospital child care rapped

VANCOUVER (CP) — Young patients at a recovery ward in the Vancouver General Hospital's children's centre are receiving inadequate care and many parents are maintaining constant bedside vigils, some parents charged Thursday.

"I stayed there for the first five days after surgery because I was too scared to leave," said one child's mother, who asked that her name not to be used.

Immediately after surgery when her daughter was in an oxygen tent and supposed to have no oral medication, the mother says she awoke at night to find a nurse preparing to give oral medication.

"Then (later) she was under strict bed rest but some student nurse wanted to carry her down to treatment. I said she wasn't to be moved and called the floor nurse.

"She came down and had a real row with the I.V. nurse. But they didn't move her," the mother said. "If they were going to move her out of her bed and carry her to treatment — what else would happen?"

Another mother said she was at the bedside one night when her child's hand began to swell after an intravenous tube was inserted in the arm.

She called a nurse "who glanced and said it was fine, and left."

"It was swelling more and more and I went for another nurse who said it was put in improperly and it was a good thing I got her. It was dangerous and the first nurse should have checked," she said.

Scott Johnson, whose son David was released from the ward this week after surgery said there have been a number of similar situations and a "sharp attitude of nurses to children."

"This isn't meat on the hook. These are real humans in three-foot bodies."

Ann Jenkins, pediatric nursing director, said she is upset about the statements but without individual patient names and dates for specific allegations she can not discuss the incidents.

"I'm taking for granted this type of thing is happening," she said. "I'm treating it as a large problem.

She said that in some cases, student nurses who are not as well trained as full ward nurses work at the hospital as part of their training.

"We are not only caring for children. We provide clinical experience for four different schools of nursing. There are times when people can use not the best judgment."

Farmland thaw lauded by owner

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government decision to review the removal of 626 acres of Langley farmland from the agriculture land reserve has been praised by a director of the company that owns the property.

Ainslie Loretto, a director of Gloucester Properties, said Thursday she is confident the cabinet's environment and land use committee will conclude it was right in originally deciding to remove the land in the Fraser Valley community from the reserve.

The committee overruled the B.C. Land Commission in deciding to remove the land from the reserve to make way for Gloucester's plans for an industrial park.

Teachers settle

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fort Nelson school district became the first in the province Thursday to reach a contract settlement with its teachers, a spokesman for the B.C. Teachers' Federation said.

The two-year contract gives the 68 teachers in the northeastern B.C. school district an average salary increase of 9.8 per cent in the first year and nine per cent in the second year.

Towboat pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — A tentative two-year agreement was reached Thursday between the Council of Marine Carriers and the Canadian Merchant Service representing 1,000 towboat mates, engineers and masters.

Corpse in chains

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — The corpse of a partly-clothed Burnaby woman, found by recreational divers Sunday in the water off Whytecliffe Park, was weighted down with two lengths of heavy chain and had multiple stab wounds, police said Thursday.

The woman has been identified as Nona Lee Stephenson, 17.

$700,000 in bids

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sotheby Parke Bernet, the world's leading auction house, wrapped up its first Vancouver auction Thursday night with a total of $707,730 in bids during three days.

The highest bid — $52,000 — went for a 1911 painting entitled The Balcony by Dutch painter Eugen De Blaas — a large oil color depicting four young women looking out over a balcony.

"We were extremely pleased with the response we got," said John Phillips, manager of the appraisal department of Sotheby's Toronto branch.

Petroglyphs saved at Parksville

PARKSVILLE (CP) — A small riverside site containing three historic Indian rock carvings has been turned over to the National Second Century Fund of B.C. to be preserved as a park.

Fund chairman Bert Hoffmeister said the sandstone carvings, known as petroglyphs, are a "fascinating piece of B.C.'s natural heritage and the surrounding parcel of forest land provides public access and a pleasant setting."

Auto test

by Richard Russell

Fiat, those people who provide Gilles Villeneuve with his Ferrari in Formula One, have done a complete rethink for the North American market and the result has to be one of the most completely rust-proofed cars for sale in North America.

This little devil has undercoating in places most cars don't even have paint. The car is built using a great deal of rust-proof zincrometal in critical areas; the car is then thoroughly under-coated at the factory before being shipped across the Atlantic.

When the cars arrive at Autoport they are once again undercoated by Fiat personnel. The plastic fender-liners are then installed and the car is as ready as any to face the elements.

To back it up, Fiat provides a three-year warranty against corrosion perforation, and to back up their faith in the very tough mechanical components they offer a two-year warranty against mechanical defects as well. This is the best warranty in the small car business.

So what is the car like to drive?

An absolute ball!

Typically Italian, the little wonder just begs to be driven. The 1500 cc engine is a jewel.

The engine is a very smooth little piece of work that started instantly at any temperature and idled as smoothly as anything in its class.

The Milton Tribune Homes, August 8, 1979

The Fast Lane

by Jim Kenzie

Typical of Italian design, the Fiat abounds with unusual touches. The square overall shape is relieved by a continuing round motif, that is seen in the door handles, heater controls, instruments, and even the door lock buttons. It gives the car an all-of-a-piece look, and is much more pleasant than an overabundance of straight, Teutonic lines.

CAR AND DRIVER

. . . it underscores our contention that the Strada really is prime Car-of-the-Future material.

The only choice seems to be whether you choose to buy the Car of the Future now, or wait for the future. We think those of you inclined toward early conversion will find much comfort in this Fiat.

POPULAR MECHANICS

. . . extensive rustproofing and improved quality control put the Strada several leagues ahead of its predecessors. The body uses Zinchrometal in all rust-prone areas, as well as PVC undercoating and plastic inner fender liners. The fit and finish impressed me as top-quality throughout.

The Toronto Sun

by DAN PROUDFOOT

You have an affair with a Fiat, you understand. You don't simply own it in the way you buy, drive and ultimately wave goodbye to other mass-produced automobiles.

Pure Fiat means more fun to drive. The gearshift is so light it feels as though you need only to use your little finger to progress through the five forward speeds. The brakes are a delight, sensitive and sure. The engine likes nothing better than high speed operation.

New-car smell

The car even comes with the characteristic Fiat new-car smell, a kind of essance d'gusto. But the Italian company also has broken new ground, for the Strada offers exceptional ride and quiet at touring speeds compared both to earlier Fiats and to the competition.

DENVER, COLO. POST
by Bud Wells

A test of a sharp-looking two-door hatchback showed the Strada's best features to be good handling characteristics, especially in the snow; comfortable seating with lots of legroom and a strong-performing engine.

MOTOR TREND July 1979
by Bob Nagy

When driving cross-country, the one facet of an interior that very quickly asserts its presence is the seating. The Strada merits very high marks in this area.

What was especially noteworthy was that even at freeway speeds, the Strada, which weighed in at just under 2100 pounds, practically ignored the 30-40 mph gusts that were causing obvious problems for many other larger and heavier vehicles.

In addition to its outstanding stability, that Strada delivered a remarkably quiet ride.

AUTOWEEK FEBRUARY 19, 1979
by Jim Gandy

The Strada, by contrast, feels firm, stable, and predictable. Through a judicious combination of spring rates and shock valving, Fiat has made the 2050 lb. Strada give the driver the impression of a car weighing 3000 lbs.

The impression of weight translates to an exceptionally comfortable car to drive for long stretches.

Friday, June 1, 1979—Santa Cruz Sentinel

We found the brakes to be exceptional. It was our impression that they are the best offered in this field. They are vacuum-assisted disc up front and drums in the rear.

The econobox class is probably the most competitive in today's automotive marketplace. And the Fiat Strada has much to offer any buyer. To overlook the Strada when shopping for a new car in this class would be a mistake.

By Arnold Wechter

ROAD TEST/Oct. '79

Begs to be driven hard on serpentine roads. Has ride that swallows dips and bumps, and "easy chair" seat and stickability rivalling some sports cars. Designed to carry 4 and does so spaciously, along with lots of luggage. Top performer of these 5 cars. It's a real "fun car." Rating: A+.

ROAD & TRACK—September 1979

The Strada amassed a whopping 11 firsts (more than any other car) in the areas of ride and handling, braking, body structure, front and rear seating, ease of folding the latter, luggage and loading, the shopping bag contest, quietness and ingress/egress.

The Strada's long suit is interior practicality, an important set of criteria for cars of this class. Comments like "Love these large, comfortable seats," speak for themselves . . . its rear seat bottom can be tipped forward to increase carrying capacity. The cargo area is tall enough, for instance, to carry full shopping bags out of sight.

Based on laboratory tests using Transport Canada test method. Actual consumption will vary. Urban winter consumption will be significantly greater. Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were lower in active trading on the Canadian bond market Thursday. The short end of the market declined 40 cents. Mid-, long-term and provincial issues dropped a half point. Corporate issues fell three-quarters of a point. The surprise announcement by the Bank of Canada to raise the bank rate from 13 to 14 per cent was attributed for the decline analysts at Wood Gundy said. Day-to-day money was available at per cent. Three-month treasury bills traded at an average of 13.66 per cent, up from 12.59 per cent last week, and six-month bills at 13.96 per cent, up from 13.00.

'Blatantly racist' cabaret barred blacks: inquiry

VANCOUVER (CP) — A B.C. human rights board of inquiry found the owners of Misty's cabaret guilty of racial discrimination against blacks who frequent the Hornby Street discotheque.

The board ordered the club's owners, E. B. Misty's Inc., to pay a total of $3,750 in damages to seven blacks and one white person in the first-ever ruling on a human rights case involving discrimination against black people in B.C. The owners also must pay three-quarters of the cost of the proceedings which began last February.

Both sides said costs of the inquiry still have to be determined.

The board said Thursday the club owners committed acts that were "blatantly racist, and of such an obnoxious and patently deceitful character that they must offend every decent and responsible member of our society."

Sixteen persons claimed that from May to December, 1978, Misty's employees harassed and refused them entry to the club solely because of their skin color.

The board, headed by Victoria lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood, ruled 10 of 18 complaints were valid, but added many of the complaints dismissed due to lack of evidence aroused grave suspicions.

Peter Spencer, Misty's lawyer, said the board didn't give enough weight to the club's arguments in the case but said he'd have to discuss the judgment with the club owners before deciding on a possible appeal.

The board agreed the club was pressured by police and liquor licensing authorities to prevent "pimps, prostitutes and drug traffickers" from entering, but said the Human Rights Code must be enforced as well as the Liquor Control and Licensing Act.

"It seems clear that the significance of this fact is not fully understood, if indeed understood at all, by some of the officials involved."

Paul Winn, president of the Black Solidarity Association, said he is pleased by the board's ruling but thinks the fines are low.

Delvin Nathan, who was awarded $500 in damages, also feels the fines should have been more severe.

"It's not the money," he said. "We'll donate the money to charity. But more severe fines would have made other clubs take greater note."

Winn said the judgment will help the association when it asks city hall to revoke the club's licence.

"At first, council refused to believe that discrimination took place," he said. Now we'll go back to city hall and ask them what happens now."

Council approved a bylaw in July that requires clubs to post a section from the city's racial discrimination bylaw together with their dress requirements. All club bouncers and managers must wear identifying nameplates and anyone refused admittance must be given the reason by the club's management.

RCMP driver faces charge

COURTENAY — RCMP constable Margaret Hood, 20, has been charged with driving without due care and attention and driving too fast for road conditions.

The charge followed a crash between her police car and a van belonging to K. and G. Heating. The accident occurred on the Cumberland-Courtenay Road.

James Rice, driver of the van, and Hood were injured in the mishap.

MacKay should be fired for letters: Kempf

Socred caucus chairman Jack Kempf said Thursday party research worker Ellen MacKay should either be fired or resign.

Kempf said statements by MacKay on the dirty trick tapes are as damaging as those made by former chief Socred researcher Jack Kelly, who quit.

Kempf, the MLA for Omineca, said a decision on MacKay's future will be made by the party's caucus next week.

Both MacKay and Kelly have hired Vancouver lawyer Robert Gardner and Kelly is considering suing the Socred party for wrongful dismissal.

Kempf, meanwhile, said he is surprised by the number of fake letters which have been turned up by editors of newspapers throughout the province.

"I am happy to see the police investigation," he said. "I am sure it will settle it once and for all."

The police probe stems from an official Social Credit tape distributed to party members during the last election campaign.

On the tape, Kelly told a seminar how to put other people's surnames on letters critical of opposition parties and candidates and send them to newspapers.

An existing name and address is used but the first name or initials are changed in an attempt to fool papers which check the author's authenticity.

MacKay is heard to add that the names are checked rarely and that "it's quite a bit safer to do than you might think."

Ron Greig, former assistant to Premier Bill Bennett's communications planning adviser, resigned two weeks ago after reports linked him to a phoney letter printed by the Victoria Colonist.

The rash of fake letters has resulted in editors and publishers of B.C. daily newspapers vowing they won't be duped again by political propagandists using fictitious names in letters-to-the editor columns.

Many are adopting new policies aimed at authenticating authors of letters in the wake of the dirty tricks letter-writing scandal during the May 10 provincial election campaign.

"I've got a sour feeling in the pit of my stomach that we've been had and I'm pretty mad about it," says Larry Scanlan, managing editor of the Nelson News.

"The letters-to-the-editor column is a powerful forum that reflects public opinions and we're not going to get caught again."

Scanlan says a check has revealed that 12 letters from people who didn't exist were published by The News during the 1979 election campaign and four from the 1975 B.C. election.

Nearly all of the letters are critical of the NDP but party president Yvonne Cocke says the NDP does not plan its own investigation.

The Colonist, which has published an apology for one letter written under someone else's name, this week asked letter writers to include a phone number where they can be reached during the day. Previously, letters were accepted if they were signed and included a return address.

"We'll be taking a hard look at new policies in the next election campaign but I don't know what they are yet," says associate editor Don Vipond.

"Now, it's sort of a war between political zealots who use the (letters) page, or part of it, for a propaganda sheet and guys like myself to see that they don't."

Vipond says the fake letters will stand out more now that newspapers are more aware of them.

"They have made us more alert to being used and we're going to make sure that we're not used."

John Farrington, publisher of Nanaimo Free Press which printed three of seven phoney letters written by Norman Hobson, a local Social Credit constituency association officer who later resigned, said authenticity checks have been intensified to include phoning writers or talking to them in person.

"Notices of reunions or letters from foreign countries asking for pen pals are the only ones that will get into this paper without being checked," he says.

Publishers of smaller newspapers have said they lack the resources to check all letters they receive and Dennis Stanley, B.C. and Yukon Community Newspapers Association president, says the political dirty tricks campaign has undermined a basic freedom of all British Columbians.

Stanley, whose association includes about 100 community newspapers, has turned over to RCMP suspect letters published by his Arrow Lake News in Nakusp.

Saanich rings chimney alarm

Chimney fires are on the increase in Saanich with rising popularity of wood-burning stoves and heaters.

Deputy fire chief Orval McGregor said when he joined the department 25 years ago, chimney fires were almost a nightly occurrence because wood and coal were still fairly common stove and furnace fuels.

For the past 15 years flue fires have virtually disappeared as oil furnaces and electric ranges became universal.

But now, as residents become more energy-conscious and fossil fuel rises in price, solid fuel appliances are coming back, along with dirty chimneys.

Because they produce creosote deposits in flues, the rate of chimney fires goes up. More frequent chimney sweeping is necessary to clear the combustible creosote away.

Besides that, McGregor urges householders planning to install a wood-burning heater to consult the fire department and to ask for a voluntary inspection when the job is done to make sure it is done right.

The service is free and could save some grief.

"We encourage people to invite us into their homes for inspection, for their own safety," he said.

Herd at UVic: 'You'll never die, Woody'

By AB KENT

Woody Herman's Thundering Herd, current edition of a 43-year-old band known to three generations as a jazz classic in dynamic tension, did its thing here Thursday night.

At the University Auditorium, the stampede proved its ability to shatter eardrums at 50 paces without electronic overamplification.

But what a way to go!

Woody, dapper at 66 and a band leader since 1936, played blues, ballads, disco-rock, pops and Aaron Copeland for an audience that appeared equally diverse. For some there was nostalgia, although Woody scorns music for the sake of reliving the past.

When he pulled one from the memory bank, like Woodchopper's Ball with its unmistakably 1940s muted brass introduction and his own lilting clarinet, he said quite simply, "that's the way it was."

Back-to-back with Chick Corea's La Fiesta, in strident contrapuntal contemporary arrangement and featuring Jerry Malega's electric piano, the contrast proved Herman's versatility and enduring ability to swing with progressive modes.

Copeland's Fanfare for The Common Man best demonstrated this capacity, blending classical, jazz and rock with his young sidemen doubling conventional big band hardware with electric bass, electric piano, piccolo, flute and tambourine.

Herman slipped into the program to set the mood The Four Brothers, which has become a Herd standard referring to the baritone and three tenors introduced 30-odd years ago, "the first time we used this weird sax section."

Early Autumn, from 1949, is another number his followers have come to expect, given its dreamy due with muted trumpets floating over deep blue reeds and lead tenor Frank Tiberi's solo.

Woody, like an articulate Jack Teagarden, sang a few verses of I've Got News for You, and carried the vocal on Sonny Boy, which he claimed to remember from the first talking picture, Jolson's The Jazz Singer.

He felt compelled to explain: "Everyone who has lived beyond his recall a long time has a big bag of trivia. It never escapes you. It's like a big rock."

At which point someone from the sixth row called: "You'll never die, Woody."

"I'll bear that in mind," he replied.

From Gatling gun staccato in Caledonia and the cacophonous Green Earrings, the band flowed into Pavane, with parts for bassoon, baritone and 23-year-old Tim Burke's piccolo trumpet.

Similarly, the trombone playing of Gene Smith showed a fine romantic sensitivity with Michel Legrand's What Are You Doing The Rest of Your Life?

Malega's piano (acoustic) and Woody's soprano sax made sweet music with I've Got it Bad, and ended on an Ellington note, too soon for the patrons who helped the Herd out of town with lusty and rhythmic applause.

Hydro grid idea on back burner

Energy Minister Jim Hewitt says it is in B.C.'s interest to sell surplus hydro-electricity to the U.S. rather than join a proposed western Canadian power grid.

Hewitt said Thursday the province has not rejected a recent Manitoba proposal to create a power grid among the four western provinces.

But in the short term, Hewitt said, B.C. could get a better price for its energy in U.S. markets than in Canada.

The story is about growing up in Victoria in the 1930s. The author brings a light touch and a sharp eye to the effect this society has on her heroine's growing years. Apart from its entertainment value Stephanie is fascinating social history.
The book is published under the author's maiden name, Joan Austen-Leigh. She was born in Victoria and is a descendant of Jane Austen. She is the author of award-winning plays and her articles and stories have appeared in numerous journals in Canada and England.

Maggie T. movie to debut in L.A.

MONTREAL (CP) — Californians will have first chance to see Kings and Desperate Men, the ballyhooed Canadian thriller shot two years ago featuring a screen newcomer named Margaret Trudeau.

Producer Alexis Kanner says the movie — which industry gossip had long since relegated to the dead-as-a-dodo category — is slated to have a seven-day engagement in December at a theatre in the Westwood area of Los Angeles. The aim is to qualify for the 1979 Academy Awards.

It will have a "saturation" release in North America at a later date, said Kanner, who is working around the clock in a small Montreal studio to put final touches on the sound track.

Guy Desmarais, president of Geoffrion, Robert and Gelinas Ltd., the brokerage firm which handled the final $300,000 in financing for the $1.2-million film, said Thursday that negotiations are ongoing to sell the movie to network television in both Canada and the United States.

In a telephone interview, Kanner admitted he had "been trying to keep a very low profile" about the film.

While it was being shot here in December, 1977, the movie managed to hit a grand total of 780 front pages around the world — mainly because of the controversial presence of Trudeau in her first role.

Written by Briton Edmund Ward, the film deals with terrorists taking over a radio station on Christmas Eve.

The major reason for the two-year delay in releasing the film, Kanner said, was a problem with the sound track.

CONTEST RULES

1. Solve the Prevue Payoff Puzzle by filling in the missing letters to make the words that you think best fit the clues. To do this read each clue carefully.

2. Check the word list. It has all the correct answers plus some you will have to eliminate.

3. You need not be a subscriber to this newspaper in order to enter. You may submit as many entries as you wish on the entry blank printed in this newspaper or exact-sized, clear, hand-drawn facsimiles of the printed entry blank. NO MECHANICALLY PRODUCED, PRINTED, MIMEOGRAPHED, etc. copies of the entry blank will be accepted. Each entry must contain the contestant's name, address and phone number or it will not be accepted.

4. Anyone is eligible to enter this contest except employees (and members of their families) of Victoria Press Ltd.

5. All entries MUST be mailed and bear a postmark. The paper is not responsible for entries lost or delayed in the mail. Entries for each week's contest not received for judging by 12 noon the following Wednesday are not eligible.

6. To qualify you must write your answer to one of the clues on the outside of the envelope. See coupon for instructions.

7. Prevue will award the current prize to the contestant who sends in an all correct solution. If more than one all correct solution is received the prize money will be shared equally. If no all correct solution is received, $50 will be added to the following week's prize.

8. There is only one correct solution to each puzzle and only the correct answer can win. The decision of the judges is final and all contestants agree to abide by the judges decision. All entries become the property of Prevue. Only one prize will be awarded to a family unit.

9. Everyone has the same opportunity to win for EVERY QUALIFIED ENTRY WILL BE CHECKED and the winner announced. No claiming is necessary.

10. Entries must be mailed to Prevue Payoff Puzzle, Victoria Press Ltd., Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4. One entry per envelope.

11. Prevue reserves the right to correct any typographical errors which may appear during the puzzle game.

12. Puzzle clues may be abbreviated and such words as AN, THE and A omitted.

PREVUE PAYOFF PUZZLE is the intriguing word puzzle game the whole family will enjoy and have an opportunity to win a big cash award every week! THIS CROSSWORD is not a draw. It tests your knowledge of words and pays off for EVERY correct solution. All you have to do is complete each of the words in a criss-cross format. Clues are provided . . . even a work list which has all the correct answers, plus some you'll have to eliminate. But there are no trick words or guessing . . . careful thought will make you a winner! So start and play today!

PLEASE NOTE: EACH ENTRY MUST BE IN A SEPARATE ENVELOPE

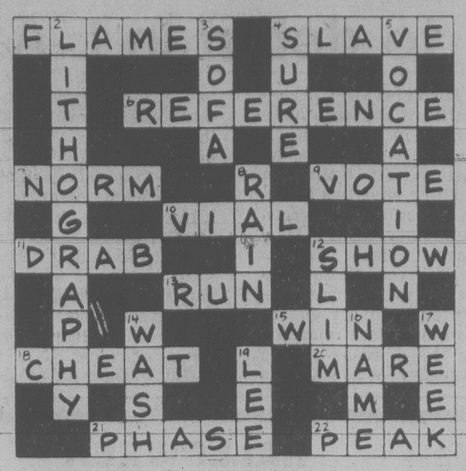
PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS

1. FLAMES not flares. FLAMES "burn of course," but the clue is less universally true of flares, some of which (e.g., kept for emergency use) remain more or less indefinitely unignited.
4. SLAVE not suave. "SLAVE" links up more characteristically with the clue's word "trader." The idea of a role being that of a "suave trader" is less natural.
6. REFERENCE not deference. Since deference means respect, it is pointless to refer to "respectful deference" as if there were some distinction to be made.
9. VOTE not note. VOTE links up more specifically with the clue's theme of "preference." A note can convey almost any idea.
10. VIAL not dial. VIAL is the more reasonable answer, since not many dials are themselves of glass (as distinct from having glass over them).
11. DRAB not Arab. As far as the average man is concerned, Arab clothes are simply not open to consideration as available attire (that he should have no particular use" for such clothes), so "DRAB" applies more realistically to the clue.
12. SHOW not snow. Going through a blizzard might be memorable. An ordinary light snow would not. Attending a SHOW would be an extraordinary experience for most people.
15. WIN not din. Through admittedly abstract in itself, a WIN (victory), rather than a din, is open to a "visual" interpretation. Also, it's a question of a WIN "with" (i.e., accompanied by) fans screaming, or of the din directly produced by fans screaming.
18. CHEAT not cheap. A CHEAT is more firmly apt, since it's possible for a man to be cheap merely in that he charges low rates for his services.
20. MARE not male or mane. "MARE" may very reasonably be linked with "stallion" as its natural counterpart. Although a stallion is a male, there is no reason at all why "male" should suggest "stallion" (there is nothing equine about the word male). Though it may reasonably suggest lion or horse, say, there is no firm link between "mane" and "stallion," specifically.
21. PHASE not chase. An exciting PHASE, whether a chase or not.
22. PEAK not teak. Since, in usage, one has high mountains and tall trees, the clue's word "high" suits PEAK better.

CLUES DOWN

2. LITHOGRAPHY not lithographs. LITHOGRAPHY, or the production of lithographs, can be said to involve a special method of printing.
3. SOFA not soft. The clue links up well with the idea of being seated, as favoring SOFA. Since all cushions are soft, specifying a "soft cushion" would lack point.
4. SURE not sore. Being sore, or simply angry, wouldn't tend to make one tempted to be overbearing or arrogant. "SURE" links up more reasonably in this connection.
5. VOCATION not vacation. In general, while a lot of people don't enjoy working at their jobs, they do enjoy their vacation, so there is nothing especially blessed about having an enjoyable vacation.
8. RAIN not pain. The clue's inclusion of the phrase "In one's face," superfluous for pain, has more point for RAIN.

3.7% air fare hike in U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Civil Aeronautics Board agreed today to allow the nation's airlines to raise their fares by up to 3.7 per cent on Nov. 1 because of the skyrocketing price of fuel.

The increase was the fourth this year authorized by the board. The total of the four increases is 25.9 per cent. A board spokesman said the latest increase authorized was "mostly due to fuel, no doubt about it."

The cost of airline fuel has risen from about 37 cents a gallon at the beginning of the year to an average of 67 cents in September. Fuel costs now account for about 24 per cent of the airline's total cost of service.

The increase comes as some of the nation's largest air carriers are reporting third-quarter losses, or drastically reduced earnings, compared with the third quarter of 1978.

The board also said it will not condone chaotic conditions in the industry caused by airlines raising their fares to the new level without properly informing the public.

When fares were increased Sept. 1, the board said, it was deluged by complaints.

The CAB has been making adjustments in airline fare ceilings twice a year since 1977. However, because of the fast-rising airline fuel prices, the board changed its policy over the summer and began readjusting the fare levels every two months instead of every six.

Wife protects bishop, shots pepper pillow

TEHRAN (Reuter) — The head of the Anglican Church in Iran, Bishop Hassan Dehgani-Tafti, escaped an assassination attempt early today when gunmen broke into his home and fired five shots into his bed.

"It is an absolute miracle I wasn't hit," Bishop Dehgani-Tafti said in a telephone call from his home in the central city of Isfahan. "They definitely wanted to kill me."

He said his wife, Margaret, the daughter of British missionaries, threw herself across him as the gunmen stormed into their bedroom. She was hit in the hand by a bullet but not wounded severely. Other shots peppered the pillow where the bishop had lain.

The Iranian-born bishop has been at the centre of a row over Christian hospitals in Isfahan and the southern town of Shiraz which were taken over by self-appointed Islamic committees after the February revolution.

His home was raided two months ago and his files destroyed and last Oct. 8 he was detained for five hours by court officials demanding payment of funds they said belonged to the expropriated Shiraz hospital.

"Three men broke into the house by jumping over a wall," Bishop Dehgani-Tafti said today.

Gunmen pull $1M jewelry heist

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two gunmen dressed like deliverymen took $1 million in gold and uncut diamonds and about $400 in cash from a jewelry story Thursday in what police said may be part of a string of such jewel heists.

Police said the bandits hijacked a United Parcel Service delivery van and locked the female driver in the back.

They then went to D £ R Jewelers in Encino, blindfolded the store owner and several customers and forced them to lie on the floor while the bandits looted the safe and fled.

West helping South Africa get nukes: Nigeria

Times News Services

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — An African spokesman Friday accused Western countries of collusion in helping South Africa obtain nuclear technology.

Ambassador B. A. Clark of Nigeria addressed the General Assembly following reports that a nuclear device was detonated in the ocean off South Africa last month.

Clark said the U.S., Britain, France, West Germany and Israel are equally responsible for the event, which he said holds dire consequences for the whole continent.

South African spokesmen have strongly denied responsibility for the blast, which was monitored by U.S. sensing devices.

Washington has been unable to come up with conclusive evidence linking the nuclear explosion to South Africa.

"South Africa's sole objective in acquiring a nuclear capability is to threaten and blackmail Africa," Clark said.

He called it part of a diabolical strategy on the part of South Africa.

"This nuclear weapons program was only possible through assistance from the Western powers and lately from Israel," he said.

The assembly asked Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to investigate the situation and report back.

In Ottawa Prime Minister Joe Clark said today South Africa has an easy way to convince others that it has not developed nuclear weapons.

The prime minister said at his weekly news conference that if South Africa wants to convince the world it doesn't have the capability to build nuclear bombs, it should sign the Nuclear Non-Profileration Treaty.

Clark said that U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance told External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald Sept. 25 "on a highly confidential basis" that an American reconnaissance satellite had picked up indications a low-yield nuclear explosion may have occurred three days earlier in the area of the Indian and South Atlantic oceans.

A U.S. Defence Department said today the United States has evidence of a mysterious occurrence in the Southern Hemisphere Sept. 22 which could have been a low-yield nuclear test or a combination of natural phenomena — including lightning flashes.

A high Defence Department official said the evidence was picked up by a U.S. "Vela" satellite over an area covering the South Atlantic, the Indian ocean and part of Antarctica.

The light curve that was registered by the satellite, the official said, was consistent with a nuclear test fireball — two successive flashes, both of them very bright, occurring within one second.

But the official said the United Statews, after a month of trying, has not been able to pick up other supporting evidence of a nuclear blast, either seismic, acoustic or the presence of radiation.

South Africa has been closely watched since it partially built a nuclear test site in the Kalahari desert about two yeare ago.

The Almanac researchers are relentless — even evaluating a hill of beans

Passion in the clambeds

By PAUL MINVIELLE

It's enough to make a guy as mad as a wet hen when he hears the old chestnut that something as scarce as hen's teeth isn't worth a hill of beans.

And just remember that a fat cat can afford to keep up to the Joneses if he remembers the old saw about being as slow as molasses in January.

A translation of the foregoing is contained in the 188th anniversary edition of The Old Farmer's Almanac, a fun-filled 176-page book well worth the $1 asking price.

Almanac researchers went to great lengths to determine how mad a wet hen can be, how old old chestnuts and old saws really are, the true scarcity of hen's teeth, and the exact value of a hill of beans (it depends on the size of the hill, but if it's 50 feet high with a 200-foot diameter at its base, it's worth more than $1 million).

And if your concept of a happy life includes longevity and an active sex life, it can be argued that a clam is pretty happy. It lives for about 150 years and remains sexually active the whole time.

The almanac's been around since 1792, and it's nice to know that if your birthday's on April 1 next year, the weather will be sunny and mild. On the other hand, if it's on Oct. 1, count on a cloudy, cool day.

Abe Weatherwise (the nom de plume of the Alamanac's weather researchers) claims next month in the Pacific Northwest will be much sunnier and drier than usual, with frosts accompanying a number of clear nights during the first half of the month.

After an early cold spell, December will be milder than usual. (So far, Abe's sounding okay.)

January will be colder than usual (drat), and February will be cold and wet (darn), with a heavy snowstorm expected at the end of the first week (what kind of storm?). A mild March will be followed by a cloudier and wetter-than-usual April (phooey), but a sunny, warm May (now you're talking, Abe.)

Next summer sounds nice, as do the fall months.

And that wraps up the weather for the next 12 months. The almanac, of course, gives detailed, almost day-by-day predictions, and its editors claim a high degree of accuracy.

Among the almanac's features is the startling news that no one on earth is less closely related to any other human than about a fiftieth cousin, regardless of color or race. Wow.

Writer Guy Murchie consulted leading geneticists from around the world to come up with this amazing news. Wouldn't Archie Bunker be pleased to know he's a cousin to Eldridge Cleaver? And how's our other cousin, Elizabeth II?

The almanac is jammed with useful information on the sleep habits of ringed snakes, wasps, rabbits, ants and a few other creatures; how to listen to radio without a radio; how to get the most for your meat dollar; how snails, water ouzels and dragonflies move; how to build your own picnic table; and the longevity of some animals, including the ass (24 years), the bat (6), the gorilla (25) and the whale (37).

Remember mairzy doats? Did you ever think it might mean, "Mares eat oats and does eat oats"? A fellow learns something new every day.

One could go on and on about the almanac's excursions into trivia, but let's end this with an epitaph, one of five the book suggests we ponder.

"Beneath these stones repose the bones of Theodosius Grimm;
He took his beer from year to year, and then the bier took him."

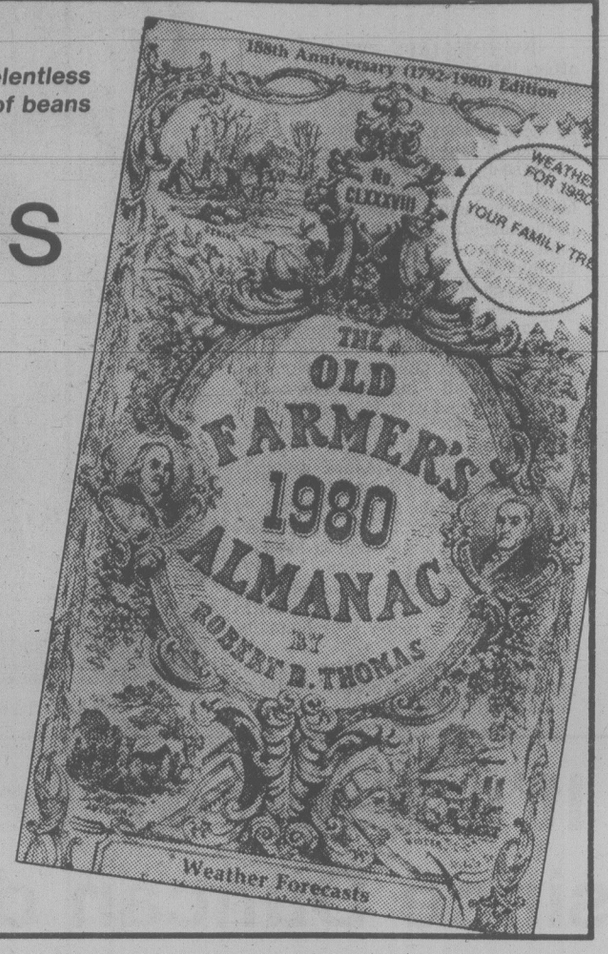
That calls for a draft and a toast to poor old Theo.



TOWN TALK

Things are getting a touch snarky on the civic election trail.

Ald. Bill McElroy says school trustee Peter Yorke should withdraw from the Victoria aldermanic race because he can't handle both jobs.

He says Yorke has one of the worst attendance records at school board committee meetings and if he tries to fill the one year he has left as trustee and also serve as alderman, both jobs will suffer.

"How could he improve it if he were holding down both jobs? No one can do both," said McElroy, who is competing with Yorke for another two-year term as alderman.

Good point the other day from Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen.

While it's nice to have a government agency which looks after the marketplace, Nielsen said it's high time B.C. consumers stood up on their own hind legs and screamed for their rights in the marketplace.

He said ministry statistics indicate that 35 per cent of people think it's a waste of time to complain to businesses that provide unsatisfactory goods or services.

Nielsen, and he's right, says most businesses are anxious to keep their customers happy and complaints quite often can be settled if a consumer is prepared to go back and discuss the problem.

Were you once a keen rower? The emphasis here is very much on the past tense and if the answer's yes, the more past the better.

At the end of November, the annual conference of the Canadian Amateur Rowing Association is being held in Victoria and the Victoria City Rowing Club hopes to put together a history of rowing here for presentation at that conference.

The club wants to hear from anyone who rowed competitively between 1900 and 1940 and suggests a call to John Edwards at 658-8598 or Kathleen Alexander at 598-6792 (both after 6 p.m.) with details.

If you want to bring to light some new material on the history of B.C. head to the Manitoba Archives in Winnipeg, according to Randy Bouchard and Dorothy Kennedy of the B.C. Language project.

The couple, just back in Victoria after a visit there, said the archives contains a goldmine of untapped material on B.C. Indians and on the trade and commerce of the province when it was a colony — all to be found in the massive Hudson's Bay papers.

"There are 120 tons of papers — containing more than 5 million pages of unpublished informative matter," said Kennedy. "The material were shipped from England four years ago when the British Government allowed the company to move its headquarters from London to Canada."

Help is again pouring in for John Stearn, the Good Samaritan of Langford who soon will make his 30th annual trip with clothing and other goods to help down-on-their-luck families in northern B.C.

Donations of clothing have been arriving at his yard in a steady stream and Goldstream Kiwanis, which John joined last year, say they will meet his ferry and gasoline expenses for the return trip.

"We'll be paying his costs again," says Kiwanis spokesman John Sherman, "even though this has been a record year for us in our community projects."

Lost a dock lately?

A resident on Murray Drive found one Thursday floating in a small bay on the Gorge in front of his property.

The dock isn't much to look at. Measuring 15 feet by six feet, its log and plank structure is showing the signs of age and weathering.

But if it's yours, call Saanich police. They'll tell you where to pick it up.

RJH seeks talks with minister as surgery waiting list grows

Q. When and why was the Canadian National Railway established? J.E.

A. The company was created by the Canadian National Railways Act of 1919. One of the reasons the government established the railway was to ensure there was competition.

Q. When was the Canadian Historical Association founded? J.Y.

A. May 18, 1922.

Q. Was the tug-of-war ever an Olympic event? L.S.

A. Yes, from 1900 to 1920.

Royal Jubilee Hospital officials are seeking an urgent meeting with Health Minister Robert McClelland to seek a solution to the growing waiting list for operations.

A report released by the RJH board Thursday night showed the waiting list in September had soared to 1,079 and many of the patients face a five-month wait.

Nine months earlier the waiting list was 852 and almost all the patients could get their operations within three months.

"This problem has been with us a long time but now it's getting worse," board secretary John Clark said today.

"We want to meet with the minister as soon as possible to see what can be done. There is nothing the hospital can do on its own to resolve this problem."

Clark said there are about 122 Jubilee beds occupied by people who would be better off in a long-term care facility.

If these beds were free for acute care, the waiting list for operations could be reduced significantly. Only the health minister can provide this extra accommodation, Clark said.

He said 250 patients on the waiting list are requiring urgent operations.

Equally disturbing, he said, is the fact that eight per cent of the patients face a wait of more than five months.

"It is difficult to determine what is an acceptable time to wait for an operation. We have been working on a target of a maximum of three months. Now it is five months — and longer."

Compounding the problem, he said, is the fact that some operations which are not urgent to begin with, can become emergency cases.

In other business at Thursday night's RJH board meeting:

— Victoria fire chief Eric Simmons was elected board chairman, succeeding the controversial Terry Prentice who did not seek re-election, although he had narrowly survived a non-confidence vote by the board. The new vice-chairman is Gwerfyl Richards. Ted Balderson continues as honorary treasurer.

— The board heard a report from a special expanded executive committee of the medical staff urging that obstetrical and pediatric care be retained at Jubilee. Under the present plan it would be available only at the new Victoria General.

The board took no action on the report other than to seek a meeting with the committee to discuss the matter further.

Fraser quits as law dean

The University of Victoria has started looking for a new law faculty dean to replace F. Murray Fraser.

UVic president Howard Petch said today Fraser has earned a break from administrative responsibility but will stay on as professor of family and constitutional law and to assist the president on special projects.

An academic committee is expected to find a new dean by July next year.

Fraser was hired for five years in 1974 to organize and launch the faculty which enrolled students the following year. He was persuaded to go another three years but said last year he doubted he would complete the assignment.

"He's done a fantastic job. We're very proud of the school of law he developed," Petch said.

City suing constable

City council moved Thurs day night to sue Constable Ralph Ovinge in county court to recover $2,662.50 in damages plus costs.

No explanation was given at the meeting and there was no debate of the motion.

Mayor Mike Young said it involved damage to a city-owned vehicle and believed a motorcycle was involved.

"It just seems that this is a good case for the courts to decide whether or not he should pay for the damage," the mayor said.

United Way half way

A total of $518,021 towards the $1,020,000 objective has been raised by Greater Victoria's United Way campaign.

Donations are continuing from many sources, included a $214 bag of small change from the pupils of Ruth King Elementary School in Colwood.

United Way volunteers will be at shopping malls and department stores Saturday to receive donations or mailers.

On Wednesday a United Way raffle on three grocery baskets each worth $500 will be drawn at Hillside Mall. Tickets are $1.

'PLAY BALL' ACCEPTED LITERALLY

WILLIE STARGELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Stargell offers this simple explanation to sum up his philosophy of baseball.

"Nobody ever said, 'Work Ball!,'" he began. "They said, 'Play ball!' To me, that means having fun."

Stargell had some fun in the 1979 World Series, hitting .400 with three home runs including the Series-winner in the seventh game. He set a record with seven extra base hits and tied another with 25 total bases, leading Pittsburgh Pirates past Baltimore Orioles to the championship.

Stargell stopped by the plush Waldorf Astoria on Thursday to pick up a car from Sport Magazine and major league baseball — his reward for being the Series' most valuable player.

He was the 25th recipient of the Series MVP Award.

"We are a very unique group," Stargell said of the Pirates.

Stargell said the Pirates' "Family" was a good example for all people. "We demonstrate a system we need in this world. I see things go on . . . and I wonder why they can't be solved. Why can't good projects be accomplished? It doesn't seem to be a problem in baseball.

"We don't need an FBI or a CIA to maintain what we're about. We did it and we enjoyed it."

Leach, Flyers flash signs of old power

PIERRE LAROUCHE
. . . fires four goals

By Canadian Press

The glory days may be returning for Reggie Leach.

When Philadelphia Flyers last appeared in the Stanley Cup final in 1976, the rangy right winger was their chief offensive weapon, topping all National Hockey League goal-scorers during the regular season and winning the Conn Smythe Trophy when he fired a record 19 goals in the playoffs.

Then things began to go downhill for the Flyers. New York Islanders supplanted them as the top team in the Patrick Division and their showing in post-season play deteriorated with two semi-final defeats followed by elimination in the quarter-finals last spring.

Meanwhile, Leach's goal production dropped sharply and his coaches, suddenly becoming aware of his defensive shortcomings, began benching him in key situations.

But Leach and the Flyers turned the clock back at the Spectrum Thursday night as the 29-year-old sniper contributed two goals and an assist to Philadelphia's 5-2 victory over New York Rangers. That gave him seven goals in as many games and abruptly ended any criticism of his checking ability.

In other NHL games Thursday, goaltender Jim Rutherford registered his 18th career shutout as Detroit Red Wings downed Buffalo Sabres 4-0 and Pierre Larouche's four-goal performance powered Montreal Canadiens to an 8-5 decision over Pittsburgh Penguins.

Montreal and Philadelphia emerged as the over-all NHL leaders with identical 5-1-1 records.

New York, fresh from a 10-2 romp over Edmonton Oilers at Madison Square Garden Wednesday, led 2-0 before Philadelphia began getting its act together with a pair of goals early in the second period.

The Flyers put the game away with two goals 11 seconds apart at the midway point of the third.

The victory gave Philadelphia a three-point lead over the Rangers in the Patrick Division standings.

Rutherford stopped 26 Buffalo shots and his teammates cashed in on three power-play opportunities as Detroit won on home ice for the first time this season and improved its record to 2-2-2.

"We took too many penalties," said Scotty Bowman, the Sabres' new coach, whose team was penalized eight times to Detroit's three. The loss was Buffalo's third against four victories an a tie.

Larouche, who alternates with Pierre Mondou as the centre for high-scoring Guy Lafleur and Steve Shutt, was the top marksman this time as Montreal needed a four-goal third period to subdue the stubborn Penguins who got two-goal performances from Orest Kindrachuk and Gary McAdam.

Shutt scored his 250th career goal and had four assists while Lafleur scored twice as Montreal fired 38 shots at Pittsburgh goaltender Bob Holland. The defeat left the Penguins in third place in the Norris Division with a 3-4-1 record, four points behind Montreal and one ahead of Detroit.

Two players cut by Cougar squad

Coach Jack Shupe isn't wasting any time.

The deadline for Western Hockey League clubs to pare their rosters to 19 players is Jan. 10, but the Victoria Cougars' boss cut the squad by two to 20 players Thursday.

Cougars dealt 18-year-old defenceman Ryan McAdams to Great Falls Americans in exchange for a 15-year-old player off the Americans' negotiation list.

Jeff Harder of Edmonton will be placed on the Victoria list.

McAdams, who was raised in Victoria but whose family now lives in Vancouver, scored a goal and four assists in four league games last season, saw action in 12 playoff games and played in all nine unbeaten games this season.

The other player to go is 18-year-old centre Dave Bourne, who suffered a severe charleyhorse during the pre-season and has been ordered home to Red Deer to recuperate. Shupe said Bourne may return when his health is "100 per cent." Meanwhile, the Cougars face a three-games-in-four-days stint this weekend with Grant Rezansoff nursing a tender shoulder and Dan Deschene, another forward, ailing with the flu.

Cougars face New Westminster Bruins at 8:30 p.m. Saturday at Memorial Arena and then head off to Seattle to face Breakers on Sunday night. Brandon Wheat Kings tackle the Cougars at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Memorial.

In the only league action Thursday night, Joe Ward scored two goals to lead Seattle Breakers to a 6-5 win over visiting Brandon Wheat Kings.

Ken Hodge made 20 saves in the Seattle goal while Scott Knickle stopped 36 for the Wheat Kings.

BRANDON (5) — Kelly McCrimmon, Steve Patrick 2, Brant Kiessig, Brad Kempthorne; SEATTLE (6) — Joe Ward 2, Tim Hunter, Dean Postlewaite, Wayne Van Dorp, Dan Held. Attendance: 971.

It's been 47 years since Duncan did it

By JIM CRERAR

When Canada's athletes take time out to relax at next summer's Olympics in Moscow, they'd do well to knock back a vodka in homage to Duncan McNaughton.

McNaughton, from Vancouver, was the last Canadian to win a gold medal in Olympic track and field.

He did it 47 years ago — in the high jump at the 1932 Games in Los Angeles.

A couple of generations and a ton of government money have since come and gone, all to little avail. Nor are we likely to regain the Midas touch in Moscow despite all those medals we won at the 1978 Commonwealth Games in Edmonton.

The fact is, much of our success in Edmonton was the result of a sports development program designed to avoid embarrassment at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

But like most government endeavors, this one was two years late starting. The result was entirely predictable: we weren't ready to take on the big-name athletes at Montreal, but against less formidable competition in Edmonton we over-achieved. It was like hitting a gnat with a sledgehammer.

"We simply can't go into any Olympic Games with the right to expect results anywhere close to what we did in Edmonton," UVic track coach Ron Bowker agreed Thursday during preparations for Saturday's Canada West University Athletic Association men's and women's cross-country championships in Beacon Hill Park.

"Eastern bloc countries have full-time athletes and steroid programs," Bowker continued. "Personally, I'm not convinced Canadians would ever want to get into it to that degree.

"What we've spent on our athletes so far is a drop in the bucket compared to what eastern European countries are spending."

There's another problem in developing medal winners — government involvement.

If the federal government decides to cut spending, sport represents a prime target becaise it's a high-profile activity, much more visible to the taxpayer than other areas of bureaucratic squandering.

"It doesn't cost much in terms of our gross national product to keep building the grassroots part of athletic programs and provide coaching, competition and facilities for the elite athlete," Bowker said. "And there's certainly nothing wrong with encouraging our kids to be as good as they can be. But if sport is going to become a political football, then we're in trouble."

Bowker, however, sees the universities playing a greater role in developing athletes — even if they don't quite make the gold standard at the Olympics.

UVic, for example, has two coaches whose salaries are shared by federal and provincial bodies as well as the university. Bowker is one of them and rowing coach Al Morrow is the other.

Saturday's cross-country championships begin at 2 p.m. with the women's 5,000-metre run. That will be followed by the men's 10,000-metre gallop at 2:30 p.m. The start and finish lines are just below the flagpole on the Dallas Road side of Beacon Hill.

Saskatchewan is the defending champion and is expected to have a strong men's team.

However, Calgary boasts Peter Butler, last year's CWUAA winner who ran for Canada's fifth-place team in the world championships in Limerick, Ireland.

UVic has a strong women's team headed by Debbie Campbell, a third-year student from Mount Doug, and Debbie Scott, a second-year student from Claremont.

But Scott, fifth in the CWUAA last year, is a question mark. A lung infection sidelined her for two weeks and she resumed training only last Sunday.

Other top women running for UVic include Anita Sobon, in her fifth year; Carol Pickard, an Esquimalt grad returning to competitive running after sitting out two years to study; Cathy Cavin, a first-year student from Oak Bay whom Bowker feels has an excellent future, and Laura Keziere, a second-year student from Esquimalt.

The UVic men's team isn't strong but one runner is worth noting.

Jim Coyne, who hails from Whitehorse, is a cross-country skier. But because of the lack of snow here, he's opted to run across the terrain instead.

Trios, Gulls play to draw

Ken Buna scored at 16:41 of the final period Thursday to lift Oak Bay Trios into a 4-4 tie with Juan de Fuca Gulls in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

Randy McKinnon, Dan Pearce and Paul Hughes scored the other Oak Bay goals while Frank Wendt, Dan Houston, Ross Anderson and Rick Milligan countered for Gulls.

Randy Vowels blocked 33 shots on the Gulls' goal while Jay Longpre made 34 saves for Trios.

Braves top Panthers

Belmont Braves vaulted into a tie for first place with Parkland Panthers in the second division of the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Soccer League by tripping the latter club 4-2 Thursday.

Dean Johnson set the pace for Belmont with three goals and Rob Leggatt scored once while Tod Holt and Alan Benn countered for the visiting Panthers.

Derman's successor selected

Gorge Vale Golf Club today announced the hiring of Jim Bell of Saanichton, a former Edmonton hotel owner, as club manager.

Bell, who will assume the post Jan. 14, is replacing Leo Derman, who is retiring at the end of the year.

The former serviceman, who is 40 years of age, brings a wealth of experience in management, administration and catering to the position.

Derman, who has been secretary of the club for almost 30 years, will be honored Nov. 21 with an "appreciation night" in the Empress Hotel ballroom.

A's, Leafs chalk up wins

Victoria Athletics and Esquimalt Maple Leafs came up with one-sided victories Thursday during play in the South Island Big Six Hockey League at Pearkes Arena.

John Entzminger and Dan Peck each scored twice to lead A's to a 9-1 romp over Princess Pats.

Bill Adkin was the top gun with two goals as Leafs tripped Western Homes Buckaroos, 9-4.

McGowen released

VANCOUVER (CP) — Linebacker Mel McGowen has been released by British Columbia Lions after playing in three Canadian Football League games.

BUTTONS WINNERS

June Treloar and Ida Sale of Prospect Lake defeated Gorge Vale's May Cross and Joan Mitchell two up at Uplands to capture the district women's golf buttons.

Vikings' rivals sound interesting

The opposition sounds like something out of Monty Python's Flying Circus so Ken Shields isn't just sure what to expect when he unveils his 1979-80 version of the UVic Vikings this weekend.

The UVic coach has lined up exhibition basketball games at McKinnon Gym against a pair of Vancouver Senior "A" men's clubs. Good Time Charlies provide the opposition Saturday night at 8 and Gary Taylor's Players are the visitors Sunday afternoon at 2.

Taylor's players have nothing to do with the Gary Taylor whom Shields replaced as Viking coach three seasons ago. The fact is, Shields isn't sure where the team got its name but suspects its sponsored by a disco.

Regardless, Taylor's Players are made up of a number of mainland college grads, including a couple of former Simon Fraser Clansmen — Larry Street and Gary Emerson.

Good Time Charlies number several former UBC Thunderbirds in their lineup, including former Canada West University Athletic Association scoring champion Steve Pettifer.

Shields got some bad news Thursday when rookie forward Tom Narbeshuber from Oakville, Ont., injured a foot in practice. He had just returned to workouts after having a cast removed from his other foot. Extent of the latest injury hinges on the outcome of X-rays.

The defending Canada West champion Vikings plan to use returnees Gerald Kazanowski, Reni Dolcetti and Ted Anderson as starting forwards this weekend with Ian Hyde-Lay, Billy Loos and freshman Ilario Pasquale available for guard duty.

Chargers zapped by kickoff return

OAKLAND (AP) — When Ira Matthews crossed the goal line after a 104-yard kickoff return, he didn't spike the ball. He didn't heave it in the air and he didn't jump around. He just stared back upfield.

"When I hit the end zone, the first thing I did was look to see if there were any flags," Matthews explained after his run sparked Oakland Raiders to a 45-22 victory over San Diego Chargers in a National Football League game Thursday.

Matthews's return came after San Diego had cut Oakland's 24-6 halftime lead to 24-15 and appeared on the verge of getting back in the game.

Matthews's long run, and three short touchdowns by Booker Russell, more than offest another 300-yard passing night by San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts. It was Fouts' fourth straight 300-yard passing game — an NFL record.

Matthews' return was the most exciting play of the high-scoring contest that saw Fouts complete 21 of 35 pass attempts for 302 yards, with two interceptions.

Wet windy weather hampering fishermen

Blustery weather has created problems for both salmon and trout fishermen around Vancouver Island during the past week and forecasts indicate more of the same for the weekend.

But the unsettled conditions should promote better deer hunting.

Skiers, too, are happy with the first few signs of snow on the higher elevations of the Island.

Despite the wind, a few persistent fishermen have been connecting with winter chinooks in a few areas.

Returns of chinooks to eight pounds are showing off Goldstream Island, Misery Bay and Chesterfield Rock in Finlayson Arm. Successful fishermen have been going deep with a little bit of everything.

Dan Lacy topped fishermen in the middle part of Saanich Inlet recently with an 18-pound winter chinook landed Saturday on a hootchie off Bamberton. A few coho to eight pounds are also showing in the same vicinity with both species biting best on blue and gold or blue and green hootchies.

Action has been non-existent off Deep Cove and Sidney while fishermen working the golf links area off Oak Bay are picking up fair catches of chinooks.

Marion Lowrie topped the catch there by boating two nice fish weighing 16 and eight pounds Tuesday.

Strip, Stingsildas and Buzz-Bombs are all working well.

Chinooks to 15 pounds and a few coho to 12 are providing a fair return at the Pedder Bay kelp bed.

Waters off Church Rock, Secretary Island and the Bluffs are yielding a few chinooks to 10 pounds on deeply-trolled strip and minnows.

Further up-Island, a few coho have been taken by trollers in Cowichan Bay and by moochers off Bold Bluff.

Other fair catches off coho were reported off Crofton near Tent, Thetis and Kuper islands.

Nanaimo fishermen hitting the water between daybreak and about 7:30 a.m. are picking up coho to eight pounds close to the kelp beds off Five Fingers on both raked herring and Hot Spots.

Nobody has been getting out in any of the other spots either on the west or east coasts of the Island and the recent rains have raised river levels to the point where coho have already headed upstream on their spawning runs.

NIBBLES: Elva Radtke, the newest Chinook Club member of the Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association, topped the monthly Frostbite Derby on Sunday with an 11 pound, 10 ounce coho salmon . . . John Sadler was second with an 11:04 chinook and Bob Redgrave third with a 9:09 coho . . . Hidden-weight winners were Wally Fenske, John Rose and Les Leacock.

Formula simple

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Forrest Fezler and Larry Ziegler, a couple of longshots who find themselves in the lead after one round of the $250,000 Professional Golfers' Association national team tourament, believe they have the key to scoring success.

"Drive straight and hit a lot of putts — that's our strategy," said Ziegler after he and his partner combined for 11 birdies and an 11-under-par 61.

That was good for a one-stroke lead in the best-ball event, with three two-man teams a stroke behind and four duos another stroke back.

Eleven teams were at eight-under 64.

At 62, one stroke back of Fezler-Ziegler going into today's second round, were veteran Jim Colbert and youngster Mike Sullivan, George Burns-Ben Crenshaw and Gary Koch-Curtis Strange.

The winners split a $45,000 first prize and get the all-important exemptions.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby and his partner, Pat McGowan, were in a tie at 65 with 12 other teams — including last year's champions, Wayne Levi and Bob Mann. Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Man., and Scott Bess combined for a 66, while the team of Dave Barr of Kelowna and Ed Fiori was another stroke back.

Morgan's 66 tops Island pros

John Morgan of Glen Meadows opened defence of his Vancouver Island golf professionals championship in good form Thursday at Uplands.

A professional who formerly played out of Uplands, Morgan tamed his old course with a four-under-par 66 to take a three-stroke lead over Mike Parker of Victoria Golf Club going into today's final round of the 36-hole event sponsored by Shortts Restaurant.

Bruce Rands of Uplands was in third place with 71 while B.C. Open champion Jim Rutledge of Uplands was fourth with 72.

"I just hit the ball straight and sank some putts for a change," said Morgan, a Canadian tour veteran who has made money in every tournament he's entered this season.

After three-putting the first hole for a bogey five, Morgan settled down with a birdie on the second hole, made a good putt for a birdie on the par-three fourth and chalked up another birdie on the par-five seventh for a two-under 33 on the front nine.

Coming back, he bogeyed the par-four 12th but birdied the par-four 10th, the par-five 15th and the par-three 17th.

Today's round is was scheduled at Victoria Golf Club.

A few surprises at awards night

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club's clubhouse was filled to capacity this week for annual prizegiving ceremonies.

Most of those attending knew ahead of time what coveted silverware would become theirs but some of the club's young and older sailors were in for a surprise.

Kim Hellwig was one of those. He received the Golby Trophy from Humphrey Golby, son of the donor who is well-known to sailors and landlubbers alike as Mr. Swiftsure for his years of covering the sailing classic.

Kim won the trophy, not only for his sailing ability, but for the help he has passed on to other juniors.

Stephanie Bacon was another to be surprised. She won the Junior Endeavour Trophy for her constant participation in club events, while Wendy McBride received the Carol MacLaren Trophy as the outstanding woman sailor.

At the other end of the age scale, the club's honorary commodore Ned Ashe, who still sails in his 80s, also received a surprise, along with Jim (Foghorn) Davis, Stan Howell and Charlie Downing. Last February they were taken on a "geritol cruise" aboard Albin 25s on a weekend trip mainly organized by Dave Anstey and Ken MacLaren. Appropriately enough, they received framed versions of a well-known cartoon, depicting an old 'rag-hauler', on his knees and begging forgiveness for having been in a power boat — and having liked it.

The club had a good turnout for its annual Lipton Cup and Whitehouse Trophy races on Sunday. Greg Oliver's The Distant Drummer was over-all winner of the Lipton Cup race for International Offshore Rule boats. Next in the 13.7-miler, sailed in southeasterlies of 10 to 20 knots, were Ross Mathewson's Kotuku, Steve Merriman's Country Style and Gerry Howell-Jones' Sian.

Bruce Kenning's Arkle was the winner of the Whitehouse Trophy race for boats with Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet ratings. After her came Jack Miller's Schrimshander, Peter Dennis' Moondance, Paul Longridge's Saga, Roy Hingley's Romada II, Eric Dowell's Shelca, Jack Woodward's Puff II, George Johnstone's Tarquin IV, Larry Shorter's Kila Kila and Gerry Porter's Lickety Split.

The club will have the first of its fall and winter around-the-buoy series racing this Sunday, starting at 10 a.m. Boats of the Turkey Head Sailing Association will also be taking part. On Saturday, RVYC's dinghy sailors will have series racing again in Cadboro Bay. The first start gun goes at 1:30 p.m.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, will also have a busy day on Sunday. The squadron's dinghy sailors will have series racing, beginning at 1 p.m., cruising class boats will compete in a B series race, beginning the samw time, and the Sailerettes will be in competition for the Heaton Trophy.

Mike Moore and crew Nick Moss sailed their 420 to top place in last Sunday's racing. Top Fireball sailor was Lee Mitchell while Olaf Thyvold led the Laser fleet. Results of the cruising class and Sailerette racing won't be known until after a meeting of the protest committee.

The Canoe Bay Sailing Club will hold a 7½-miler in waters off Sidney on Sunday. The race will begin at 10 a.m. in the vicinity of the government wharf at the bottom of Beacon Avenue.

Results of last Saturday's six-miler will have to wait until Peter White gets back from Banff and gets a chance to work out the handicaps.

If you're in the Willows Beach area this Sunday watch out for some colorful action by Victoria's enthusiastic Hobie Cat Fleet. The fleet plans to have the first three races in its fall series. A skippers' meeting will be held at 10 a.m. Racing should get under way at 11 a.m.

Members of the Victoria Canoe Club also have some activity planned for Sunday. They will meet at the bridge over Esquimalt Lagoon for a paddle around Esquimalt Harbor. They're reminded to bring warm gear to combat that cold nip in the air.

The Bluewater Cruising Association holds the first in its famous ocean voyagers series on Sunday at the Provincial Museum's Newcombe Auditorium. Beginning at 8 p.m., Nancy Griffiths will relate and show pictures of the circumnavigation of Antarctica she and her husband made in their boat Awahnee. Tickets are $5 each and can be picked up at the door or at Sailtrend on Newport Avenue, the B.C. Maritime Museum and Suntime in Sidney.

Ken's timing stops Clock

Ken Shields dunked the winning basket with 10 seconds left on the clock Thursday to give Henderson Realty a 90-88 decision over Cuckoo Clock in Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League play Thursday at Central Junior High School.

In the other game, Darrell Johnson scored 20 points to lead Trilec Seniors to a 79-78 win over DataTech.

Chris Trumpy set the over-all pace for Realtors with 30 points and Shields added 26.

Dave Mulcahy sparked Cuckoo Clock with 29 points and Gary Budd contributed 22.

Go slow on pot urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The provinces urged the federal government Thursday to go slow on decriminalization of marijuana, Ontario Attorney-General Roy McMurtry said.

He said provincial attorneys-general at a federal-provincial conference here on justice told federal ministers to keep in mind the health hazards posed by marijuana.

Federal Health Minister David Crombie has said the Conservative government wants to remove the criminal penalties for personal use of marijuana, a position supported by all parties in the Commons.

McMurtry said this is a growing concern to provincial governments, which have responsibility for health.

"We are fearful that any significant change in the federal law may be interpreted wrongly by the public as a reduced concern about marijuana," he said.

"There is growing evidence that marijuana is a serious health problem," McMurtry said.

He added that too much of the discussion about marijuana concerned legal questions. "The health hazard has been lost sight of," he said, suggesting that governments should publize the risks of prolonged use of marijuana.

McMurtry said his views are shared by the majority of the provincial ministers attending the two-day closed-door conference.

On a related issue, British Columbia pressed the federal government for an amendment to the Criminal Code to allow judges to sentence convicted drug users to voluntary drug-treatment centres instead of prison.

Earlier this month the B.C. Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional a provincial law which forced heroin addicts — even against their will — to undergo three years of treatment in a detention centre.

Chief Justice Allan McEachern of the B.C. Supreme Court said his ruling means the provinces can't even treat volunteers under the act.

Because 60 per cent of the nation's heroin addicts live in B.C., the province is anxious to get federal co-operation to resume the program.

Justice Minister Jacques Flynn has promised to bring in a bill during this session of Parliament to allow voluntary treatment only.

Oil prices 'far too low'

MONTREAL (CP) — An oil company executive predicted Thursday it will cost Canada a staggering $300 billion over the next 10 years to become self-sufficient in petroleum.

William Richards, president of Dome Petroleum of Calgary, said Canadian prices are far too low to give oil companies the money they need for more exploration.

He said U.S. producers are left with $24.75 after taxes on a barrel of oil worth $35 (Canadian). But he said Canadian companies get only $13.75 a barrel and are left with $8.15.

In both cases he estimated cost of production at $1.50 a barrel.

Richards, speaking at a seminar sponsored by the Montreal chamber of commerce, suggested Canada should adopt the U.S. system which has two prices for oil — one for wells already in production and another for "new" oil.

George Though, director general of energy strategy in the federal energy department, said he fully agrees with European countries which have set their gas price at $3 a gallon and said Canadians, in real dollar terms, are paying less now for gas than they did in 1950.

Meanwhile, in Edmonton, Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed has warned Albertans "to batten down the hatches" in preparation for the fight to protect the province's rights to oil and natural gas.

"You and I are in a confrontation . . . some of you may not like it, but you'd better be prepared to batten down the hatches," Lougheed told 900 party faithful at a $150-a-plate fund raising dinner in an off-the-record speech.

"Alberta is being asked to keep both oil prices down and give up part of its Heritage Savings Trust Fund. That is the position being presented."

In what one observer described as the "toughest" stand he had ever seen the premier take, Lougheed said the price increases and negotiations in 1973, 1974 and 1975 will be like "kindergarten" compared to 1979 and 1980.

Canada's oil supply teetering on the brink

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

OTTAWA (CP) — The complex chains of oil wells, refineries, pipelines and ships that fuel Canadian homes and vehicles are stretched to the breaking point.

While opinion surveys consistently reflect public scepticism about warnings of possible oil shortages, government and industry experts alike are tensely preparing for potential disaster this winter.

Canada's supply-and-demand situation is so finely balanced, they say, that failure of just one part of the system could create chaos, especially if combined with unusually-cold weather.

At Quebec City, one oil-short refinery has been trying without success to buy 450,000 barrels of Alberta oil that would be delivered to it by tanker from the West Coast.

Alberta and Saskatchewan oilfields pump that much oil every six hours — but the refinery has been unable to accumulate that amount over two months.

The western oil industry, one official says, has been running at capacity since April: "Every barrel is spoken for."

In addition to the 1.7 million barrels a day produced from domestic sources, the country will need to import 500,000 barrels a day this winter.

If imports are disrupted, areas east of Montreal, where prairie oil pipelines end, face chaos.

But in addition to that vulnerability to import disruptions, a general weakness faced by industrialized countries, Canada this winter is dangerously vulnerable to domestic disruptions.

The official assessment, by both federal and provincial analysts, is that supplies of heating oil and gasoline will be "tight but manageable."

But that forecast is based on the assumption that nothing — nothing — goes wrong with any major production source, refinery or pipeline.

Problems at a Gulf refinery in Edmonton already have some observers worried.

But perhaps the most concern centres about the giant Syncrude Canada Ltd. oil sands plant in northern Alberta.

The $2.2-billion plant started operations last year and has been turning out 100,000 barrels a day this summer. Design capacity, to be reached by 1982, is 129,000.

Last winter, however, herculean efforts were needed to wrench even 30,000 barrels a day out of frozen sand at 40 below zero. At times, production stopped altogether.

Two-ton lumps of oil sand crashed onto conveyor belts; three-foot teeth on giant buckets snapped like plastic forks in the frozen sand; fires and explosions buffeted the complex chain of processing tanks that turn the unusable oil-sands oil into high-quality synthetic oil.

Much of the needs of consumers will be riding on Syncrude's success or failure in solving such tough problems this winter.

"We're in a situation where our resources are fully stretched," one official says. "There's no give on the production side and no readily-depletable inventory."

Others say one or two major incidents could mean worse gasoline lineups than recent U.S. experience.

Even with everything working smoothly, supplies are currently tight.

The booming western economy has created near-record increases in demand there, while central and eastern refiners push for more western oil.

Ffederal import subsidies theoretically compensate those refiners for the price difference between Alberta and Middle East oil — currently about $11 a barrel delivered in Montreal.

But the compensation is based on average import prices. Every additional barrel of Alberta oil the refiners can get for $15 by pipeline or $17 by tanker means they can do without a $35-imported barrel from the high-priced spot market.

While such refiners pass up currently-available imports for price reasons, preferring to deplete Alberta supplies at an increased rate, refined products are being lost for similar reasons by other means.

Aviation fuel in Vancouver, for example, has been in strong demand because foreign airlines flying across the Pacific prefer to get the bulk of their fuel there instead of paying higher U.S. prices.

Gasoline inventories at the end of September were extremely low across the country; the approach of winter means refineries must concentrate more on using available oil to produce heating fuel.

Worried federal and provincial authorities are finding that there is little they can do to improve matters quickly.

Long-term measures to stimulate new production and create an energy-efficient society will come, but cannot be effective this winter.

Ottawa is thus preparing allocation programs and gathering information to help implement such programs, even while officials cross their fingers and hope rationing will not be needed.

CUPE digs in on McDermott

HALIFAX (CP) — Dennis McDermott, embattled president of the Canadian Labor Congress, appeared to have failed Thursday to get support for his leadership of the labor body from the Canadian Union of Public Employees, the CLC's largest member.

The CLC circulated a statement to reporters at the conclusion of its executive council meetings Thursday indicating the council's unanimous support for McDermott and the position he took in not supporting a strike by the Canadian Union of Postal Workers last October.

But CUPE president Grace Hartman emerged from the meeting and denied she had voted in favor of the resolution. She declined to explain her action and left the hotel to catch a plane.

McDermott said he was not clear where Mrs. Hartman stood but was heartened by the support of the other members of the executive council who represent the member unions of the CLC. About 20 of the 30 executive councillors attended the meetings here.

McDermott and other CLC officials told a news conference that Mrs. Hartman supported a resolution expressing continued confidence in McDermott on Tuesday but when a more detailed resolution of support was presented Wednesday she opposed it.

CUPE's national policy convention in Quebec City last week called for McDermott's resignation on grounds he turned his back on CUPW during its strike last fall.

CUPE is the largest affiliate in the 2.3 million-member CLC, an umbrella organization for most of Canada's unions.

The CLC's statement said its executive council reaffirmed its support for McDermott and of his actions in connection with the CUPW strike last fall.

The statement said that according to reports received by the executive council the resolution seeking McDermott's resignation and the ensuing debate "were riddled with inaccuracies which gave a misleading picture of the situation to CUPE delagates."

Charles Bauer, the CLC's co-ordinator of public relations, said following Thursday's meeting that Mrs. Hartman told the CLC executive council here that her union's resolution committee had proposed non-concurrence with the resolution to dump McDermott. But CUPE's rank and file members supported it 1,000 to one.

Bauer said Mrs. Hartman supported a resolution at the meeting here Tuesday which asked the executive council to reaffirm "its position of unqualified support for the leadership of Dennis McDermott as president of the Canadian Labor Congress."

But when the matter was raised again Wednesday with a more detailed resolution of support she opposed it.

Toronto women find Prince charming

TORONTO (CP) — Prince Philip arrived Thursday night from Calgary for a two-day visit and made an immediate impression upon several women attending a convention of the Order of the Eastern Star.

"My goodness, he's better-looking now than when I first saw him over in England," one grey-haired woman said as Philip moved through his hotel lobby surrounded by RCMP and local police.

During his visit here, Philip will be the official visitor of Upper Canada College, which is celebrating its 150th anniversary. He will be at the college today and Saturday.

12-day wilderness ordeal cold but 'worth it'

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — Jeffrey Veigel spent 12 days huddled under a tarpaulin in northern Manitoba bush country, waiting to be rescued.

Veigel was part-way through a one-man canoe expedition from his home in Bloomington, Minn., to Churchill, Man., when he ran into trouble.

A rock in the river split his fibreglass kayak apart, leaving the 24-year-old adventurer stranded about 150 kilometers north of Thompson.

For Veigel, who had been paddling on Manitoba waterways since late July, the tarpaulin, 1,600 kilometers from Bloomington, became his home.

"It wasn't the Ritz," Veigel said in an interview from the home of a friend. "Essentially, I just sat under the tarp and wished it was over.

"But for all the reputed harshness of the north country, it was bearable.

"You didn't have to worry about Montezuma's revenge. There were no snakes. The moose didn't bother you. The water was drinkable and if you had to, the moss is edible. There are fish in the streams.

"I always had a hankering to take a long trip alone. I had gone canoeing with others, but I wanted to go into the bush by myself."

Veigel said that after the kayak broke open Oct. 12, he expected that he would have to wait at least nine days for help to come.

Snow fell Oct. 14 and it stayed five centimeters deep. With temperatures below freezing, Veigel was grateful for the generosity of people he had met earlier in the north.

"They would say, 'You're crazy to go but here's a parka' and 'You're crazy to go but here's some extra socks'."

Veigel said he decided that if no one had found him by Nov. 13, he would try to walk to the town of Kelsey, a distance of 13 kilometers as the crow flies.

Veigel, who had been last seen Oct. 2 on Split Lake, was rescued by RCMP Tuesday, the day after a search plane spotted his kayak's red hull against the snow and circled the spot.

"I knew he saw me. I could have stayed there 10 weeks then. I knew I didn't have to make snowshoes and walk out."

Veigel said that after making long portages across muskeg carrying the kayak and heavy supplies, he was lucky he didn't run aground during the mosquito season.

"I was miserable most of the time," Veigel admitted.

Veigel noted the best part of such an expedition usually is planning beforehand and talking about it later.

Was the trip worth it?

"I saw moose 15 feet from my tarp. I shared breakfast with four otters on Lake Winnipeg. I saw the auroras at night, dancing across the sky. This I bought with every paddle stroke. Those few moments were worth it."

Veigel said the arduous journey also taught him that "there's no room for mistakes in the north."

He said his advice for others would be, "You can survive. Don't panic. Say, 'That guy made it, maybe I can'. I know I read about guys who were in worse situations than I was who survived."

1-stop divorce system near

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government and the 10 provinces are near an agreement on one-stop divorce proceedings which would allow couples to fight child custody and divorce cases in the same court.

Bill Jarvis, federal-provincial relations minister, said in the Commons Thursday that the issue was discussed earlier this week in Halifax when he met his provincial counterparts and "we were almost unanimous."

A steering committee formed at Halifax composed of Jarvis, Justice Minister Jacques Flynn, Saskatchewan Attorney-General Roy Romanow and Quebec Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin plan to meet next month to discuss the issue.

Jarvis said he hoped an agreement would be reached by December, when Prime Minister Clark meets the 10 premiers for discussions on economic and constitutional questions.

The previous Liberal government had hammered out an agreement with the provinces on a shifting of family law jurisdiction at a constitutional conference in February.

The process of constitutional reform halted with the federal election May 22 and the resulting change of government. The Halifax meeting was the first attempt to renew that process.

The British North America Act of 1867 gives the federal government responsibility over divorce and the provinces responsiblity over child custody cases.

Therefore, a couple must go to one court to obtain a divorce and a different court to fight over the children.

Under the tentative agreement reached with the previous Liberal government, divorce legislation would become a shared jurisdiction.

Jarvis said he agreed with the Liberals' approach to the family law problem.

You are South and the bidding has gone:

South	West	North	East
1 ♢	Pass	2 ♢	Pass

What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠Q94 ♡AKJ ♢KJ63 ♣AQ8
2. ♠AQ87 ♡5 ♢AJ74 ♣KJ65
3. ♠AJ ♡93 ♢KQ7652 ♣AK4
4. ♠10 ♡A7 ♢AKQ54 ♣KQJ92

1. Three notrump. Partner has indicated 6 to 9 points by his diamond raise, and there is consequently good reason to think you can make nine tricks in notrump with your 20-point hand. It would be wrong to bid only two notrump, which North might pass.

2. Pass. There are only two bids worth considering — pass or two spades — and good arguments can be made for or against either of them. Favoring the pass is the probability that you can't make eleven tricks in diamonds, since partner gave you only a single raise and you have little more than a minimum opening bid. There is also a strong probability you can't make ten tricks with spades as trumps, since North failed to respond initially with one spade.

Favoring the two spade bid is the possibility that partner might have J-x-x-x of spades, in which case a spade game could be feasible. There is also the argument that a two spade bid would probably silence the opponents, while a pass would allow the next player to come in cheaply with two hearts.

3. Three clubs. There may be a game in either notrump or diamonds, and you can best indicate this by bidding three clubs — even though you have only three clubs. You hope that partner, with adequate high cards in the major suits, will say three notrump or else make some other type of constructive bid.

4. Four notrump. Here there is a distant aura of a slam in diamonds, and by far the best way of investigating the possibility is by making use of the Blackwood convention for aces. If partner indicates one ace by responding five diamonds, you should go on to six. If North has the club ace, you will almost surely make twelve tricks; if he has the spade ace instead, you will still have a reasonably good chance for the slam.

This is one of those cases where, even if partner has an ace, you may still come home lame. North may have the wrong ace, or West may find the killing heart lead, or the cards may not mesh well at all. But, even so, you'll make money in the long run by trying for the slam.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, October 27
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You utilize natural qualities of independence, originality and pioneering spirit. Superior aids in getting to heart of matters. Leo, Aquarius natives figure prominently. Standing in community will be elevated. Know it, be direct and confident.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A sudden, dramatic event could lift you from throes of lethargy. You're going places and you know it. Accent on intuition, travel prospects, long-range projections. A special conference could be on agenda.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Misunderstanding with member of opposite sex could result in "emotional knots." Avoid this by being direct in connection with commitments, financial and otherwise. Surprise social invitation could lead to joyous reunion, celebration.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take time to be correct in assessments, appraisals and outlining of potential. Check legal rights, permissions. Focus is on partnership, joint efforts, public relations and marriage. Aquarius, Scorpio persons figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Pacing is more important now than in recent past. Be aware, keep medical-dental appointments and strive for harmony with co-workers. Member of opposite sex sends you "romantic" message. The number 5 figures in scenario.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Creative changes occur at homebase. Be diplomatic, but imprint your own style and beautify surroundings. Be analytical, dig for information and tie "loose ends." Gemini, Leo, Sagittarius and another Virgo crowd scenario.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Shortcuts may not suffice; select quality material. Build on solid base. Be familiar with apparent minor points, details and weak links. Eliminate safety hazards. Romantic interlude lends spice to scenario.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Relative who paints bright picture may not be telling the whole truth regarding necessary rsponisibilities, investments. Ask questions, obtain answers and utilize lessons gleaned from recent experiences. The number 8 figures prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Obtain hint by reading Scorpio message. Financial windfall is not unlikely. What had been missing will become available — know it and refuse to lower expectations. You're due for added recognition as you improve distribution, display techniques.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You make new starts in new directions. There is valid opportunity for creative expression, getting to heart of matters and strengthening position. Circumstances favor your efforts. Puzzle pieces fall into place. You'll celebrate!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emotions tend to obliterate logic. Know it and do something about it. Maintain cheerful demeanor when visiting one confined to home, hospital. You obtain necessary answers by checking behind the scenes.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Aura of optimism dominates. Perceive potential, see picture as a whole. Social activities accelerate. Your popularity is on upswing. Gemini, Sagittarius natives figure prominently. Effort which may have failed on two occasions succeeds "next time."

IF OCTOBER 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you have come through a testing period and new opportunity is now on horizon. People are drawn to you during times of crisis. You are intense, aggressive in pursuit of goal. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. Travel, increased social activity indicated for December. What seemed a defeat is due to be transformed into rousing victory. You have unique talent for dramatizing beliefs, graphically illustrating aspirations. Intuitive flash provides key for success in November.

Air ops offer work trade-off

OTTAWA (CP) — Striking air and marine radio operators have agreed to resume essential services for 48 hours on condition the government return to the bargaining table and drop all disciplinary charges against them.

A spokesman for the Public Service Alliance of Canada said today that government treasury board negotiators have been informed of the operators' decision and are expected to reply later today.

The decision was made by alliance headquarters and regional coordinators of the strike by almost 1,200 radio operators at 142 air and marine stations. The operators so far have left 16 stations unmanned.

Meantime, disputes continued over whether the four-day-old strike by almost 1,200 radio operators, also known as flight specialists, at 142 air and marine stations is posing any danger to the travelling public.

Reports that government negotiators are refusing to return to the bargaining table, until the operators resume services designated as essential to the safety and security of the public, were confirmed by a treasury board spokesman.

In the Commons, Transport Minister Don Mazankowski said any of the 609 essential service operators not performing their designated duties are likely breaking the law.

Violations of the Public Service Staff Relations Act governing the operators, represented by the Public Service Alliance of Canada, could bring a maximum penalty of $100 for each violation if the government successfully prosecutes.

A Transport Canada spokesman said prosecution is being considered. For the time being, the government is suspending violators for from three to 10 days — to be served after the strike — and plans to start firing those who do not show up at all.

Only 47 per cent of all the operators have a legal right to strike. The rest are required to perform essentials but as of Monday most had pared their work down to emergency duties, such as answering distress calls only.

Mazankowski said in the Commons that transport department investigators told him there is no substance to allegations that the strike has led to dangerous incidents — "Essentially, all operations are safe, if somewhat abnormal."

Details of transport investigations into some of at least a dozen hazardous incidents cited by the union will be released today, a transport spokesman said.

Before the judge

A 28-year-old man was committed for higher court trial on a charged of attempted robbery with threats of violence following a preliminary hearing Thursday in provincial court.

Joseph Charles Edward Leblanc, no fixed address, was charged in connection with a Sept. 25 incident at the Fort and Government branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie has elected trial by judge and jury.

Judge William Ostler rejected defence lawyer Donald Currie's application for a discharge and imposed a suspended sentence instead on a 21-year-old woman who pleaded guilty to possession of the restricted drug LSD.

Debra Lynn Brummel, 419 Catherine, changed her original plea to one of guilty and was given the suspended sentence and six months probation.

Crown counsel Martha McNeely told the court Brummel was checked in the 700-block View at about 9:15 p.m. June 14 and found in her purse were seven "hits" of LSD.

Currie said his client had possession of the drug because an acquaintance asked her to hold on to it because he was drunk.

Christian Eric Hurn, 19, of no fixed address, was remanded until next Friday for a pre-sentence report and sentencing.

He pleaded guilty to two counts of possession of LSD for the purpose of trafficking on Oct. 3 and 12.

An argument in a Sidney club resulted in a $35 fine for a 34-year-old man and a suggestion by Ostler that family squabbles are better kept at home.

Michael Carl Compton, 2031 Courser, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance Sept. 23 by fighting in the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans, 9831 Fourth Street.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Sidney RCMP were called and arrived shortly after 1 a.m. to find a crowd around the men's washroom. The fight apparently began at the tables and carried on in the washroom.

Compton said his brother-in-law, who was a co-accused and pleaded not guilty, had been aggravating him. Compton's brother-in-law had his trial set for Jan. 30.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Sven Edward Torgerson, 27, of 2591 Florence Lake, $700; Manuel Decosta Galego, 44, of 3171 Carroll, $450; Ronald John Makara, 26, of 612½ Nelson, $450; Andrew Charles Burgess, 73, of 10070 Fifth, Sidney, $400; Richard David Hall, 20, of 10469 All Bay, $350; John Donald Marsh, 24, of 2644 Prior, $300; and Ronald John Wharton, 23, of 611 Admirals, $50.

In addition, Galego was fined $150 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident and Wharton was given a suspended sentence and 75 hours of community service work for mischief causing wilful damage.

Dec. 4 court hearing on outfall

Three citizens' groups which don't want a sewage outfall built off Esquimalt Lagoon will go to B.C. Supreme Court on Dec. 4.

The court will be asked by the Concerned Citizens of B.C., 3504 Happy Valley Road, Albert Head Ratepayers' Association, 3758 Duke, and Colwood Ratepayers' Association, 3543 Charnley, to review the cabinet decision Dec. 11, 1978, allowing the outfall.

The three groups are asking for an order that the cabinet decision be quashed, and the cabinet be directed to reconsider and determine the issue in favor of the citizen groups fighting the outfall.

Apologize to lawyer: judge

One teenager will be sentenced in county court next month while another was discharged Thursday for robbery in an alley off Johnson Street early Sept. 22, 1978.

James Stephen Alexander Wallace, 18, pleaded guilty Wednesday, mid-way through a joint trial with Stanley Steven West, 19. They were accused of beating Hugh McIlwraith and stealing $250 from him.

At the end of West's trial, Judge E.J.C. Stewart said he felt pretty sure the youth was somehow involved but the prosecution had to prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt.

The judge told West he hoped he would apologize to his lawyer, James Main, whom he had attempted to fire at the beginning of the trial saying he wanted a better lawyer.

He remanded Wallace in custody until Nov. 21 so a pre-sentence report can be prepared.

The judge noted that jail is not new to Wallace. He spent a month in custody on this offence and was sentenced to four months for breaking and entering and theft last year. He received a suspended sentence for an earlier mischief offence.

Also in county court, Judge Stewart fined Marc Anthony Poirier, 23, $300 for trafficking in marijuana by giving an inmate at Wilkinson Road prison four cigarettes during a visit.

Stewart said a fine is appropriate because he didn't see Poirier becoming a menace to society and it had cost him $300 to get to court from Alberta where he working in the oilfields.

Frances Michael James, 33, will be sentenced Nov. 20 after pleading guilty to six counts of uttering forged cheques totalling $940.60 in Sidney.

Lighter sentence given shoplifter

A 29-year-old woman who is rehabilitating herself was granted a reduced sentence Thursday in B.C. Court of Appeal.

Mary-Anne Dixon Parchoc was sentenced July 9 by provincial court judge D.K. McAdam to two months in jail for shoplifting a coat last February. She has previous convictions for false pretences and two thefts.

If those were the only facts, said Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz, he would not be inclined to change the sentence but defence counsel Robert Metzger had introduced mitigating circumstances.

Nemetz said the woman has responded well to treatment for alcoholism and is attending business school to improve her skills.

He and Justices E.E. Hinkson and J.S. Aikins agreed that she should be sentenced to time already served in jail, from July 9 to 17 when she was released on bail pending the appeal, plus six months probation with the conditions that she perform 100 hours community work service and continue alcohol counselling.

Aikins said the provincial court sentence of two months jail was entirely appropriate on the material before Judge McAdam and it was only developments since then that caused him to agree to a different sentence.

Peter Kent, CBC-TV's Africa correspondent, has resigned from the CBC to join the NBC news team in the new year. The 34-year-old journalist was a former reader of CBC-TV's National newscast before he was assigned to Africa in September of last year. "Peter Kent is one of our best correspondents and it was inevitable that he would be sought after by one of the American networks," said Cliff Lonsdale, chief news editor for CBC television. "We're sorry we will be losing him and we wish him good luck." Kent joined the CBC in 1974 after several years with the CTV and won an award from the Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists (ACTRA) for his battle-scene coverage of Cambodia. He assumed the $65,000-a-year-job as newsreader on The National in November, 1976, after Lloyd Robertson resigned from the corporation to join the rival CTV network.

Television talk show host Johnny Carson may enter the Las Vegas hotel-casino business under a proposed agreement announced with National Kinney Corp., a building maintenance and parking lot service firm.

The communist government of West Bengal state gave a reception in Calcutta for Nobel laureate Mother Teresa, the saint of the gutters, and 5,000 people attended. "We feel proud that Mother Teresa started her work in Calcutta," said Chief Minister Jypto Basi.

The most valuable literary award in Britain, the $21,500 Booker McConnell Prize, was given to Penelope Fitzgerald for her novel Offshore. Lord Asa Briggs, who headed the judging panel, said the novel about a houseboat community on the Thames River of London was "pefect as it goes."

The Starship Enterprise travelled the galaxy as usual, but to some Tallahassee viewers, it appeared the destination might be the Twilight Zone. Capt. Kirk met Mr. Spock with, "Bonjour," and Scotty's accent was decidedly not Scottish. Joe Hosford of station WCTV said the distributor mistakenly sent the French version of the hour-long science-fiction show.

Dr. Robert Runcie will be installed as Archbishop of Canterbury on March 25.

Dear Abby:
I recently became engaged to a wonderful young man who lives in another city. I was very happy until he informed me that he had decided to share an apartment with a woman co-worker until we get married next year!

He assures me that the arrangement is strictly a financial one — that he prefers to live with a woman that he already knows is honest and reliable than to advertise for an unknown male.

Although I want to trust him, I can't help feeling resentful.

He tells me that when I come to visit, I will be convinced that there is no romantic involvement, but I don't know if I can reserve judgment until then.

Fuming

Dear Fuming:
Stop fuming and start rooming with a male friend and see how your fiance takes it.

Dear Abby:
Yesterday I spent two hours scrubbing our tile shower with a toothbrush, detergent and bleach. It sparkled. My husband's only comment: 'You missed a spot by the door.'

This is typical of his reaction to nearly everything I do.

We've been married only a year, and I can't see myself taking 20 or 30 more years of his petty faultfinding.

Hurt

Dear Hurt:
Communicate the hurt, anger and frustration you feel. Choose the proper time to vent your feelings, and encourage your husband to vent his. 'Every animal revenges his pains upon those who happen to be near' (Samuel Johnson). Chances are that your critical husband is hurting, too.

Dear Abby:
My son has been married for two years now and, would you believe, I have never seen my daughter-in-law in a dress. Never!

She wears jeans in the daytime, and when she gets dressed up, she wears pants suits. She's a nice looking girl and I think she would look so much more feminine in a dress, but I swear to goodness, I don't think she owns one.

She's not sloppy; she just likes pants, I guess. I mentioned to my son once that I had never seen his wife's legs, and he just laughed and said she had two like everybody else, and that was the end of it.

Mom-In-Law

Dear Mom:
Your daughter-in-law has the right to wear what she wants, and she obviously prefers pants. You've mentioned your preference to your son; that's enough. Unasked-for advice is seldom appreciated.

Children salute fellow kids

By LON WOOD

Walking into Victoria's Sundance school, one might have thought they were in an exotic restaurant.

On the staffroom stove were pots of a Nigerian peanut-vegetable soup. At the table, a gang of children and adults were whomping up a feed of kiribath — a rice dish from Sri Lanka.

Sundance secretary Bindo Lalari cautioned that the food was hot as teacher Alan Wilkinson scooped some rice for the enthusiastic youngsters to taste.

"I think kids in Canada got the best deal — they get fed lots, and a good place to sleep," said student Sally Hoover after sampling the rice — which is sole fare for millions of children around the globe.

The cooking exercise was included in Sundance's International Fair held Wednesday — International Day of the Child — as part of the school's International Year of the Child commemorative activity.

The day-long event included ethnic tales, films, songs and arts demonstrations — such as the British art of marbling, Japanese origami and illustration of flags from other countries.

There were exhibits of toys, books, stamps, currency and clothing from other lands — as well as a demonstration of Canadian native legends by Neep Hoover of the Provincial Museum — who used authentic Pacific North Coast ceremonial masks.

From Pearson College of the Pacific, visitors Woo Yuen Pau and Taina Lowe came to talk with the students.

Richard King, who has brought music groups to Sundance for free concerts before, Wednesday brought his guitar. The former Californian led a singalong:

Gently down the stream..."

A chorus of young people chimes in with its own lyrics, and everyone breaks up with laughter:

"Throw your teacher over board
And listen to the scream!"

Sundance principal Donna Woolliams said some 115 students, six teachers and about 20 parents were on hand Wednesday for the special day.

"A lot more contributed time and materials although they could not be here due to working," she said. "It is one of our projects — we call them offerings — developed between staff and parents who have been together throughout International Year of the Child."

The IYC is "never over," said Woolliams, who added that she is pleased the pupils jumped into the experiences so eagerly.

The students themselves hold a variety of perspectives on their lives in relation to the lives of fellow children worldwide:

"It's really been a neat day — seeing how they eat and dress and all that," said Matthew Ponsioen.

Has he travelled?

"Only once to Holland and once to Seattle," he said. "We don't go very many places."

Matthew's brother Martin said most of his aunts, uncles and cousins in the Netherlands speak, read and write English.

I knew some Dutch words — like the word for please," said Martin.

Susie Lieberherr said she was interested in child life in foreign places, but stressed that life in Canada is probably the best for a kid.

"You get to stay up later here — sometimes," she said. "And they (Canadian children) have good families — usually."

Brendan Noonan said he would like to travel to other countries but wouldn't like to live anywhere else.

"Here, most of the kids I'm used to. They talk my language, too. But I would like to learn two other languages — Chinese and French."

"I was born in Boston and then I travelled to New Hampshire," said Paige Crocker as she paused to talk while examining a small drum from India. "Then I went to an island somewhere — I can't remember which one. I would like to learn what kind of things they do at school in other places. I think I'll try India first, and then Japan."

Jeremy Turner put down his earphones at the listening centre he was at and told of a family friend who comes from Africa and now lives in Toronto.

"He's told me about the hot places in Africa," said Jeremy.

For lunch the gathering sampled the African soup and kiribath — for which the recipe follows.

KIRIBATH from SRI LANKA

125 mL rice
375 mL cold water
125 mL flaked coconut
30 mL sugar, fruit jam or honey

1. Wash and strain the rice and put it in the saucepan.
2. Add the water and bring to a boil.
3. Cook over low heat for about 8 minutes, until tender.
4. Drain the rice, and keep the cooking water in a measuring cup. Add enough water to make 250 mL.
5. Put the rice and the water into the saucepan.
6. Add the coconut, stir and cook uncovered over a low heat until all the waterhas gone.
7. Press the mixture into a baking pan.
8. Sprinkle with sugar.
9. Let cool for 20 minutes, then refrigerate for 1 hour.
10. Cut into 12 squares and top with jam or honey. Eat and enjoy!

Drugs can end shingles discomfort

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I am 67 years old. After recovering from pneumonia several months ago, I got a case of shingles. Even though the shingles have disappeared off my chest, I still have pain and itching. Sometimes it drives me to distraction. Will it ever go away?

Mrs. T.S.G.

Dear Mrs. G:
Any doctor who has ever followed a patient with shingles anywhere in the body can appreciate what you are going through. Shingles, also known as "herpes zoster" or "zona," is an acute infection of the nerves that come from a portion of the spinal cord.

The most characteristic symptom of shingles is the appeareance of blister-like eruptions of the skin, associated with intense pain. The vesicles on the skin may appear after a few days of chills and fever. Most often, the eruption occurs on the chest and the abdomen. Other parts of the body can also be affected by the virus that is responsible for this distressing condition.

People in late middle age — and the elderly — are most often affected. Those who have had a severe illness, such as you have, and have been devitalized by it, are more prone to this added infection.

Even though the acute phase of the disease runs a limited course of about three weeks, the problem that you describe, unfortunately, lasts much longer. The persistent pain in the chest and itching of the skin are due to a form of neuralgia. Cases have been reported of pain that has lasted a year or more before it disappeared. This is not to say that your pain will necessarily last that long.

"Post-shingles neuralgia" is a very trying problem for both the doctor and patient. There are now many drugs which can successfully control the pain and make life bearable until the condition completely disappears.

Doctors now have a wide variety of such drugs.

Dear Doctor:
Since I have been put on a diet without salt my life is unbearable. I wonder which is worse — he high blood pressure or the fact that I can't eat anything.

Mrs. M.V.

Dear Mrs. V.:
Most people who have been placed on a low salt diet seem to adjust to it after a while, and they do not mind the elimination of salt. The advantages in reducing your high blood pressure should more than compensate for this deprivation.

There are several new low-sodium substitutes for salt which are produced for people who have high blood pressure, heart problems or simply weight control.

youth clinic

Dear Mr. Vichert:

I am an 18-year-old boy starting to go out with a girl 14. I have been plagued with comments such as "robbing the cradle" and "jail-bait." I also have heard stories about fathers sending boys to jail just for being seen with underage daughters.

I would like to know exactly what can happen to me in legal terms and whether this particular age difference is uncommon.

Answer: Affection for people doesn't have age limits. A four-year difference between people who love each other, especially once the teens have passed, is not uncommon.

Many fathers would consider 14 too young to start serious dating, particularly if the young man was 18. Naturally, parents would worry about such a relationship. The legalities involve sexual behavior since it is against the law to have intercourse with a minor.

Dear Dr. Levine:

Recently you told an extremely shy girl to consult a psychotherapist and get into sensitive group psychotherapy. If she's so afraid of people, I don't see how she will be able to talk to a psychotherapist, especially in a group.

I am a duplicate of this girl. I am 18, pretty and an honor student and very shy. I have five brothers and sisters, all very outgoing. I am the second youngest. My oldest brother, 27, and sister, 25, whom I love and trust, try to get me to talk and take me out with them.

They've offered to take me to see someone but it wouldn't do any good.

I stay in the house all the time and have few friends because they like to go to parties and discos. When guys look at me, I turn red and look away.

Could hypnotism cure my shyness?

Answer: Shyness is a common and painful emotional experience, the more so because of society's obsession with groups, gregariousness, "relating," competition, assertiveness — all attributes which make a retiring, private individual feel like a misfit.

You have passed the stage where brief consultation with a psychoterapist would be helpful because you find that well nigh impossible to do. A hypnotherapist might be useful in the beginning, to help overcome some inhibitions and look at some of the causes of the shyness.

In your case, the shyness seems to have progressed to a phobia (unrealistic or neurotic fear) and is intensely painful. It is also readily amenable to psychotherapy. I would recommend — even though you reject it in advance — that you see a psychotherapist, after the hypnotherapy if you want.

Dear Dr. Cotter:

I am 13 and my brother is 16. For months, it seems every time we talk we get into a fight. I might be able to settle all the fighting if my brother didn't keep stretching the truth in his favor. I have tried to talk to my mother but she says we could get along if we tried harder. My father gets mad when I try to talk to him about it.

Answer: Your mother is wrong. This kind of thing is not settled by trying harder. The problem originates in trying too hard. Your brother and you are trying hard to be more important than the other. He probably is worse and has to stretch the truth. Your mother tries to be sensible; your father tries hard and that results in his getting angry.

The problem is you and your brother try to get the amount of credit — Brownie points — you each think you should get. You have a rivalry which for him goes back to when you were born. If you want to get ahead of your brother and all the rest of the family, read Games People Play by Eric Berne.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I am 16 and have been going with my 18-year-old boyfriend for quite some time. We have a close and stable relationship and are able to talk openly about everything. We have never had intercourse, though we have talked about it and thought that we've known each other long enough and love one another enough to do so. If there is any chance for me to conceive, we will not have intercourse. I feel I'm too young to go on the Pill. Can you suggest any other safe contraceptives. My discipline and values are strong and I wonder whether 16 is too young for this sort of action. What do you think?

Answer: The dilemma is one that many girls and boys face today. On one side, you have been brought up with values and attitude which raise doubts. On the other hand, you are living in a society which appears to condone the same type of behavior.

If you have to ask if you are too young to have intercourse, then you should put off the decision until you are sure.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

wheels
by mike lamm

Dear Mike: My Corvette won't run hot and cold the way it's supposed to. The car has air conditioning. When I move the control wheel from A/C to heater or defrost, the blower still pumps air out the air-conditioner vents. The airflow doesn't change ducts. Any hope?

Breezy

Dear Breezy: Those Corvette thumb wheels never did work very well. Chances are the cable that controls the heater door has gone out of adjustment. Or it might be loose or broken. Possible the heater door itself is stuck or warped. Adjustment is pretty critical, because the mark between A/C and HTR is supposed to let air flow through all outlets at once. To check, take off the shifter plate on the console. You'll need a tiny Allen wrench to remove the twin vent levers. And be very careful with those fiber-optic "wires" leading to the lamp monitors.

Dear Mike: I have a 1914 Connecticut license plate in perfect condition. Does this have any value? If so, how much and how do I sell it?

Old Timer

Dear Old Timer: Get in touch with the Connecticut Historical Automobile Society, Inc., 149 Jennifer Rd., Hamden, Ct. 06514. Ask them to put an ad in their publication, "Chaschatter." I have no idea of the plate's value, but someone in the club ought to be able to give you an estimate.

Dear Mike: My 1977 Omega makes a loud rasping sound when I back up and sometimes when I slow down. It never makes this noise going forward, even when I accelerate quickly. The sounds are getting louder. Is this common, and if so, what causes it?

Fretting

Dear Fretting: Your drive shaft is arching upward on reverse torque. Check for a loose pinion nut on your differential, worn universal joints, or loose U-bolts that hold the rear springs onto the axle housing.

Dear Mike: I have a crack in my windshield. I was told that to keep the crack from lengthening, I should scribe the glass at right angles to the crack. How deep should this scribe mark be, and will it work?

Cracked

Dear Cracked: I've never heard of this, and I doubt that it'll work. A shallow scribe mark wouldn't have any effect, and a deep scratch (or another crack, in effect) will simply start creeping in a different direction.

College turns out more farmers

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — A survey by the Ontario Agricultural College here indicates that more graduates are going into farming today than did those of 10 years ago. Conducted by the dean's office, the survey examined post-graduate activities between 1967 and 1979. It shows that the proportion of students pursuing a career in farming is increasing steadily. About 26 per cent of the 1979 graduating class has chosen farming as a career, compared with only five per cent in 1967.

Safer routes booklet out

A booklet with tips on how to find safe routes to school is being recommended to B.C. school districts by Transportation Minister Alex Fraser.

Use of the booklet by school teachers is being advocated as part of a province-wide safety project initiated by Fraser's ministry.

Fraser has written to all 75 school districts asking them to circulate the booklet — A Teacher's Guide for the Safest Route to School Project.

Copies of the booklet and the letter are also being sent to the ministry of education and the B.C. Safety Council.

The booklet was prepared by the Traffic and Engineering Safety Department of the American Automobile Association and is endorsed by the B.C. Automobile Association.

"It deals with a simple technique whereby children can be shown which roads and streets to use to go to school and how they can concentrate at the best points for crossing busy highways," the minister says in his letter.

Included in the booklet are sample street maps, child participation forms, film information and parental guidance material.

Parents are encouraged to help select the safest route to school and agree to its regular use.

The safe route technique can be used to plan approved footpaths and school crosswalk protection.

It could also be useful in the selection of new school locations by showing how traffic-pedestrian conflicts might be reduced, Fraser said.

The BCAA has also issued its annual reminder to motorists and children alike to be on the lookout for each other next Wednesday night — Halloween.

The association's recommendations included one that drivers use even slower speeds while the youngsters are out trick or treating.

Codco kooks to play here for a week

By NORM GIDNEY

Codco comes back. This group of crazy Newfies with a "social message" to their humor is returning to the Belfry theatre for a one week run starting Tuesday.

When they played Victoria for the first time two years ago, it was rumored they were breaking up. Happily their demise has been delayed and the deprived people who missed the funniest comedians this side of St. Louis de Ha Ha, N.S. last time round can now indulge themselves.

It is a difficult exercise to analyze their humor. It falls apart in your hands, but trust that they are funny, incredibly funny.

Part of it seems to depend on Newfoundland's special culture and cuisine, its folklore and archaic ways and words. Scrod and screech and flipper pie just by themselves sound funny to us underprivileged people west of the strait of Belle Isle.

Newfoundland is inherently funny. That's not meant in a nasty way. On Codco's first excursion to Canada's other bookend island, they brought with them all sorts of official government tourist literature which was plastered around the theatre to set the tone.

What other province boasts there are 40,000 moose roaming the province and adorns a big travel poster with a mug of a moose? Who else would warn that snakes are nonexistent? Funny, no?

Let me try to describe a few of the skits the Codco troupe mounted at the Belfry last time.

The plot of the first is simple: a television crew is shooting a commercial for a variety of Campbell's soup. They run into an unforeseen hitch. Nobody, from the golden-throated actor hired at great price to deliver the pitch, to the script assistant, can bring themselves actually to say "Campbell's cream of mushroom soup."

Everyone chokes on the fourth word. Nobody can bring himself to say "cream of mushroom" without the gag reflex taking over. Repulsive and vomitory, you say. On paper it seems that way, but in the theatre I have never laughed so hard with so many other helpless, teary-eyed people.

Codco's humor is also sharp and satirical. They did a lovely send-up of the concerned Toronto theatre group who come to Newfoundland "to do a play about the fishermen." It's a dramatic, spooky play called Ghost Fishing and the Codco comedians put everything into it, with plenty of melodramatic music and Strindbergian gestures.

The best of it was the line one serious Torontonian actor delivered, eyes bulging and teeth bared: "They eat the guts and throw away the white parts. They told us so."

A third skit showed Codco's great adeptness at pantomime, as a St. John's landlady showed a prospective tenant her compact little efficiency suite. They edged through the door sideways and she pointed out the handy little couch and chairs, and so on to the other bits of dear, wee furniture.

Codco did it all with no more props than a few chairs and hats. Except for a weird Monty Pythonesque bit involving strange rites out on the marshes of Newfoundland, which was a film made back home, they were incredibly and unrelentingly funny.

If you value your sanity, stay away. But for a good time, call the Belfry and reserve tickets now. You'll be able to tell your grandchildren you once saw them. At $5.50 ($4.50 for students and senior citizens) it's cheaper than a bottle or a prescription of uppers.

Walk, hobble, propel yourself down to darkest Fernwood next week, and expose yourself to something really funny.

Living to knock on musical doors

By AUDREY JOHNSON

What does it take to make a good teacher?

Experience, specialized knowledge, joy of communication, a passion for proselytizing in a particular field. All that and something more according to Alma Brock-Smith.

One of Canada's most eminent teachers of piano and lecturers in the art of pedagogy, the attractive soft-voiced woman is on an unassailable pinnacle from which to survey and analyze her profession.

Alma Brock-Smith now lives in Victoria, having come here from Winnipeg on Robin Wood's invitation to join the faculty of the Conservatory of Music. She had moved to Winnipeg in 1963 from San Francisco where she had had an outstanding career. Soon afterwards she became a member of the University of Manitoba school of music, teaching piano, duo-piano playing and lecturing on pedagogy.

The "something more" is the ability and the patience to lead a student to think for himself, as an individual; constantly to listen, search and analyze.

She credits long-time teacher and friend, Dr. Lyell Gustin, with opening those doors for her.

Of her frequent role through the years as a festival adjudicator, she will tell a class of young pianists: "I'm just another pair of ears. When you go out that door you become the teacher."

She reflects: "To put it simply, I think being a teacher means the ability to knock on the door of another person's mind."

An aura of serenity surrounds Brock-Smith as she talks but in the course of a couple of lengthy conversations one is made aware of the vitality, the passionate dedication that motivates her; the impatience rising to intolerance, for sub-standard effort and neglect of talent.

She believes that festivals have great value for some people but abhors marks because they are an imprecise yet too arbitrary evaluation in most cases.

Small centres where there is minimal year-long exposure to good music benefit greatly from festivals, she says. In some of these centres children tend to have very little musical background. At one festival she recalls adjudicating a class of youngsters playing Bach.

She opened her comments by asking who knew what a chorale was. After a silence a boy piped up: "Anyone knows what a chorale is ... it's a place where you keep horses."

Brock-Smith

She considers that parents — or teachers — who place great emphasis on winning, pervert the festival's purpose. By putting unnecessary stress on the child, they can do incalcuable harm to a budding talent.

That thought leads to another. "Teachers frequently have to bring into play a keen psychological perception ... and sometimes they can find themselves in a father-mother relationship with a student. But whatever the relationship the psychological factor is always at work with a good teacher."

What does Alma Brock-Smith look for in a serious student who comes under her tuition? First, intensity, she says. "Then the power to sustain drive which is absolutely essential in a career-minded student. Third, organization; the ability to organize studies, practise, lifestyle; to keep everything in appropriate balance and make maximum use of the time at one's disposal.

She points out that there is a great gulf between talent and success.

"Even with exceptional talent there are imponderables. Some are personal — again drive, staying power, ambition. And some are not, like opportunity; what is often called 'the breaks' which can open a way through the heavy unrelenting competition young artists face for a place on the concert stage"

During her career in the United States, Brock-Smith taught and lectured at the San Francisco Conservatory of Music and the University of California at Berkeley.

It has been said of her that she is "a diagnostician par excellence, pointing out the weakness in a performance and providing in the same instance, the positive advice which may be used immediately."

In San Francisco she initiated the duo piano program at Berkeley, whereby it was made compulsory that some time must be spent in two-piano study in order to graduate.

"This is important," she says, "because duo piano study develops a strong ensemble sense and leads naturally to other kinds of ensemble performance."

Are there drawbacks to being a woman in music?

"As teachers there are no problems for women at all," she answers. "Women as performers — yes, I would say there are problems. The constant travelling involved poses great difficulties for a woman. Anything like a normal home life is next to impossible.

"But there are, and always will be, young women tackling concert careers nevertheless; and always a relative few who will succeed.

"Perhaps even some who will succeed in achieving the best of both worlds."

But Alma Brock-Smith's experience is clear: whatever the ultimate level and quality of achievement, for those whose talent is powered by drive and dedication there is only one road. And it often leads to the top.

Recitals underway

Among classical composers whose contribution to the chamber music repertoire is considerable, Johannes Brahms is a giant. No other composer of his generation, possibly excepting Dvorak, composed such a quantity of chamber music.

One of his masterpieces in the idiom, the Quartet in C minor, will be performed on the opening program of this season's Faculty Recital Series at the University of Victoria.

The UVic School of Music series will present each program in pairs; on Sunday at 2:30 p.m. and Monday at 8 p.m. The first pair takes place this Sunday and Monday in the recital hall of the Music Building.

The first program will include Anton Reicha's Quintet in F Major played by the Pacific Wind Quintet and Kent Kennan's Sonata for Trumpet and Piano in addition to the Brahms.

Performing the Brahms will be Robin Wood, piano; Paul Kling, violin; Jaroslav Karlovsky, viola, and Linda Hougland-Daniels, cello. The trumpet sonata will feature Louis Ranger with Robin Wood.

The Victoria Volunteer Bureau receives requests from a variety of organizations throughout Greater Victoria for volunteers to help each a wide range of crafts and hobbies. Some positions require an advanced level of skill on the part of the volunteer. People with an interest and willingness to learn are also needed for positions for which training will be provided.

Volunteers share the excitement and pleasure of crafts with children, teens, seniors and people with special needs. Volunteer jobs are available in many areas of Victoria and programs take place in the daytime and evening.

Who needs you?

An Oak Bay residence for the elderly is looking for volunteers with skills such as basketry, weaving and macrame to work with residents on weekday mornings. Help is also needed for Christmas crafts.

An after-school program in the James Bay area needs volunteers to help children with projects such as silk-screening and paper crafts.

A charitable organization needs volunteers to produce hand-made items for sale at fund-raising bazaars. Volunteers could either work at home or could join a group which meets to work on items over coffee. Materials are supplied.

An intermediate care hospital needs an adult volunteer to work with the disabled elderly teaching techniques of lacing, tooling and dying leather. Patience, empathy and knowledge of physical disabilities is necessary.

A mental health activity centre is looking for volunteers to work with members on a one-to-one basis with crafts such as sewing, rug and cushion hooking, knitting, macrame, pottery and small novelty items.

A recreation program for boys and girls aged 7 to 17 years of age needs volunteers to share skills such as ceramics and painting in this after-school and evening program. People without special skills as well as those with ideas for new programs are also most welcome.

A hospital for the elderly in the Cloverdale area needs volunteers to help with simple arts and crafts. Time is to be arranged with the volunteer.

A workshop for the disabled needs volunteers to work directly with members and to help with general duties. People with skills in basketry, sewing, weaving, ceramics and silk-screening as well as those who would like to be trained to work in these areas are welcome. Volunteers would be asked to work one-half day per week.

For more information on these and the many other volunteer positions listed with the Victoria Volunteer Bureau contact the Bureau at 386-2269.

Want some risk in your life

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Bored with a humdrum existence that offers no challenge and no thrills?

Then learn to hypnotize a chicken and teach a fowl how to fly, recommends a United States recreation expert.

Adah Strobell, an associate professor at the University of Maryland, told a weekend recreation leaders conference that the elements of risk and achievement are absent in today's world.

At one time for man, merely surviving each day was a challenge. But while it was perilous, it offered an adventure.

"We taken all of the fight out of the world," said Ms. Strobell. "People today don't even realize what a rut they're in."

She urged the recreation leaders to get people involved in activities that provide thrills and a sense of accomplishment.

Ms. Strobell provided an example of a bored, city-bred youth who was beginning to get his kicks through shoplifting and drug use.

He was given a chicken by a recreation leader. The chicken was interesting to him at first, but he soon lost interest.

So the recreation leader taught him four ways of hypnotizing the bird and enrolled the youth in the International Chicken Flying Association.

The lad spent hours encouraging the chicken to fly, with the hope of matching the world record for chicken flight.

"Obviously, not everyone is going to enjoy flying chikens," she said. "But it gave that youth a sense of achievement and helped him fight his boredom."

Ms. Strobell said Canada and the U.S. are "nations of spectators" and recreation leaders should be encouraging people to break that situation.

"Being a spectator is a life of second-class experience. How long can one go on living through someone else's accomplishments?

Yippie pie splats guv

NEW YORK (UPI) — California Gov. Jerry Brown got a lemon coconut pie in the face Thursday while en route to an appearance in New York.

The pie, hurled by Yippie pie-thrower Aron Kay, hit the governor on the side of his face as he arrived at a school entrance where a band was playing Beatle songs in anticipation of his arrival.

"And they say campaigning is a piece of cake," said Brown later. "The thing that gripes me is it's not on my diet."

Kay, who was not arrested, said the action was a "non-violent pie assassination" he undertook because he was upset that Brown was "kissing up to Howard Jarvis," who led California's tax-cutting Proposition 13 drive.

Duncan team 2nd in first aid

A first aid team from Duncan has won second prize in an international first aid competition held near London, Eng.

The eight-member team — all employees of B.C. Tel in the Duncan area — was competing with 13 teams from Belgium, Holland, Germany, Ireland, England and Yugoslavia for the International Buxton Trophy, the world's top industrial first aid award.

Tom Stothard, team manager, said a four-man team of Wayne Strang, Ted Moore, Rance Butler and Ron Kelly, selected by coach Harry Eaton, placed second over-all in the finals on Oct. 7.

It was the best performance ever by a Canadian team.

Last year a B.C. Forest Products team from McKenzie placed fifth.

The competition was won by the Kent constabulary which has taken top prize in five of the last seven years the event has been held.

Energy policy 'shallow'

The Social Credit government is demonstrating shallow economic thinking by selling off coal at cheap prices while advocating higher prices for domestic oil, Liberal Leader Jev Tothill charged Thursday.

He said the commitment to sell coal at cheap prices was made during Premier Bill Bennett's recent trip to Japan and Korea for discussions with businessmen.

Tothill said Bennett has also called for Canadian oil prices to rise to inflated world levels.

"Energy policy is non-existent," Tothill said. "There is no plan to deal with the problems of the 1980s with any kind of integrated approach."

The Liberal leader said in a news release that Canada must lessen its dependence on high-priced, scarce oil by switching to less expensive, abundant coal.

"Our public policy should be to build coal-fired steam-powered electrical generating stations to run new efficient rapid public transit systems, and to heat our homes and offices.

"The spent steam from these plants should be used to heat greenhouses, thus making us more self-sufficient in food production. We must also prepare to power the non-polluting electric car which will be with us soon."

He said the Social Credit action simply aggravates problems caused by the absence of an energy policy.

Elephant fossil found

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Soviet scientists have dug up a giant, 8,000-year-old elephant they think belongs to a previously unknown species. Tass news agency said the fossil, discovered at Kustanai in Soviet Kazakhstan, is bigger than any known elephant, with a height of 3.5 metres feet and tusks over one metre long, it said.

Right shoes a must for muddy garden

Suitable clothing for wet weather gardening must be comfortable as well as waterproof, or nearly so, but footwear must be entirely waterproof and preferably not too heavy.

Our soils are seldom frozen in winter, and when they are we should not walk on them for it is likely to be only two or three inches deep. Each footstep will bring away a chunk of soil as it is warmed with the foot pressure.

It is the sticky wet soil in fall that we find more necessary to cope with, for usually some work remains to be done.

Some men like to wear a lightweight leather boot with a smooth composition sole and medium weight wool socks. Mud sticks to some extent but not too badly. For heavy digging, a pair of hiking boots are wanted, but do choose these carefully so that they will not become a burden a carry around when muddy. Feet and leg muscles tire when working for a few hours on uneven ground that is loose, and wet.

Women have difficulty in finding comfortable winter footwear for gardening. Overshoes and ordinary walking oxfords do not solve the problem, even though the heels are sturdy and comfortable for walking.

For some jobs high, zippered rubber (or probably a plastic composition) boots with a lining, over heavy wool socks are good, though here again mud sticks in the instep. On grass paths and in woodland gardens they are just about a perfect combination.

The warmest footwear I have found for general garden purposes is a pair of men's suede shoes with thick smooth composition soles and what have been known as platform heels — that is, no instep on the outside to collect mud. These can be found in small sizes suitable for many women. When worn with a pair of medium to heavy wool socks, they can be comfortable for six hours of outdoor work.

All these types of footwear need cleaning — brushing, scraping the soles, using shoe polish on leather, a stiff brush on other materials, sometimes water and a cloth.

One fall when rain came early I tried tying plastic bags over my summer work shoes, which were really in their last stages of usefulness. The bags were fastened around the ankle with plant ties. It was amazing how free of mud the plastic remained, and there was no additional weight to the old summer footwear.

A new set of bags was needed each day I remember, but it was a fine temporary measure which may suit some readers who are in the garden only seldom when the ground is really wet or muddy.

Just over 10 years ago, I found a pair of women's leather golf oxfords for sale in the local shoe repair store for $10. In perfect shape though obviously worn, I still have them, resoled with leather, though the tops are no longer waterproof. They are my summer digging shoes, still sturdy and comfortable, though not weatherproof on top.

A point I think worth mentioning especially for women is not to use plastic covering on the head in rain. The sound of raindrops is annoying, focusing the mind on rain, and the plastic has a cold feel where it touches the neck, chin or face. Use a cosy wool toque or cap. It absorbes moisture to be sure, but it won't get cold. You dry it well indoors before using it again.

And for everyone who hates raindrops dripping down the back of the neck even with coat collar turned up — what is wrong with a woollen scarf, lightweight, well up around the neck? It is more comfortable to dress according to the weather and the work than to complain constantly about the rain.

Outrage greets Tory decision to boost rates

OTTAWA (CP) — The government declared a firm intention Thursday not to flinch from pushing interest rates so high consumers are wrenched out of their inflationary buying-spree, but Prime Minister Clark promised to consider measures to ease the burden on the poor.

Parliament hovered near the brink of pandemonium several times as outraged politicians charged the government with imposing intolerable costs on the public and of pushing the economy into a deep recession.

The uproar followed a decision by the Bank of Canada Wednesday to raise its pace-setting lending rate to a record 14 per cent. It was the fourth — and most criticized — bank rate increase since the Conservatives became the government May 22.

Adding to the dismay over high rates, the Royal also announced it is increasing its residential mortage rates by one per cent, effective immediately.

The one-year open (no penalty) conventional mortgage is up to 15 per cent from 14 per cent.

Rates for regular three- and five-year mortgages are 14½ per cent for NHA and 14¾ for conventional mortgages, up from 13½ per cent and 13¾ per cent, respectively.

Clark admitted that low-income families and pensioners will find it more difficult to make ends meet as a result of the government's conviction on high interest rates, reduced government spending and few give-aways are the only way to break the grip of inflation.

He told Liberal MP Aideen Nicholson (Trinity) the government is looking at relief measures for this hard-hit group.

As MPs and senators grilled Clark, his cabinet ministers and bank governor Gerald Bouey in Ottawa, lending institutions across the country fell into line with the central bank, raising the cost of loans to consumers, small businessmen and farmers. Mortgage rates were expected to go up soon.

The chartered banks boosted their prime rate — the floor on which all other interest rates are based — to 14.75 and in some cases, 15 per cent.

The prime rate is available only to the banks' blue chip borrowers, usually large corporation. A consumer with a good credit rating would probably pay 15.5 per cent, a small businessman or farmer 15.75 or 16 per cent.

Both the New Democratic Party and the Liberals demanded an emergency debate on interest rates in the House, but their appeals were ruled out of order.

Undeterred, they call for adjournment of the day's sitting as an expression of anger over Finance Minister John Crosbie's refusal to appear before a Commons committee to defend his economic policy. That motion was defeated in a 117-to-96 vote.

The same committee, meanwhile, was busy cross-examining Bouey on his latest interest rate increase.

Outside the Commons, NDP finance critic Bob Rae said his party would not be satisifed until Crosbie resigned.

The Liberals took a more conciliatory approach, partly because they found it difficult to explain away the seven similar bank rate increases they imposed in their last year in power.

Bouey, appearing before about 50 MPs and almost as many journalists in a crowded committee room for almost three hours repeated his now-familiar justification for boosting interest rates to higher levels than the country has ever known.

The medicine is painful, he conceded, but the disease of uncontrolled inflation and a sinking dollar would be far more damaging in the long-run.

The most effective way to make sure Canada continues to be a sufficently attractive market for investment to keep money flowing in to cover its huge and growing foreign debts is to raise interest rates, he said.

The country appears headed for an international deficit of more than $7 billion this year.

Bouey told the committee that while he does not have reason to believe that the chartered banks in Canada are financing speculation, he said he has asked them not to lend money for speculative purposes.

Fisheries boat makes dramatic sea rescue

A Victoria man and woman owe their lives to a dramatic rescue carried out Thursday afternoon by the fisheries patrol vessel Laurier off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

"They (the crew) did an excellent job," Bamfield lifestation coswain Dave Hegstrom said today.

Hegstrom said the Laurier's master Jack Gosse, his officers and men carried out the rescue with great skill.

The Laurier was alongside the Bamfield lifestation when a radio plea for help was received from Dave McLellan and Jink Barber aboard the 40-foot troller Daleson.

McLellan said yhe vessel was at anchor in Pachena Bay but weather conditions were worsening.

Hegstrom, who went with the Laurier on the rescue mission, said it was one of the worst days he had helped to carry out a rescue.

He said waves washed over the Laurier's bow and winds were gusting up to 95 km/h with waves up to 10 metres high.

He said Mclellan abandoned his boat after being told it would be extremely difficult to tow the Daleson or escort her into Bamfield about 12 kilometres away.

Hegstrom said a rubber boat was put over the side of the Laurier and the two people taken on board.

Later the Daleson broke her anchor line and today Hegstrom said she is grounded on rocks about a kilometre from shore on the west side of Pachena Bay.

3-part UI abuse attack

OTTAWA (CP) — Employment Minister Ron Atkey said today the government will implement a three-part program to control overpayments and abuses of unemployment insurance.

Atkey told the Commons there will be closer co-operation with the provinces in maintaining employment records and co-operation with business for records of employment and reports on hirings.

The latter step would prevent abuse by individuals who continue to collect unemployment insurance after finding a job.

A government report tabled this week showed unemployment insurance overpayments last year totalled an estimated $290 million.

SCs walk out of house after snub by Speaker

OTTAWA (CP) — The five members of the Social Credit party walked out of the Commons today after failing to be recognized during question period.

Fabien Roy, leader of the group that has been fighting an unsuccessful battle for recognition as a party in the 282-seat Commons, led a walkout down the full length of the Commons chamber as Prime Minister Clark was answering a Liberal question.

Roy and Adrien Lambert had repeatedly sought to be recognized to ask a question and when they failed, began standing and talking every time Clark rose to respond to a question.

Roy said outside the Commons the MPs will return Monday and walk out again if they do not get recognized after the Liberals and NDP.

"And we'll keep doing it until they realize that we have rights here. We'll keep interrupting the questioning and use all the means available to us."

Roy defended the group's actions, saying it must be recognized because it is the only effective opposition from Quebec.

The Liberals have been in government too long and the Progressive Conservative are trying to take over Social Credit, he said.

Rimouski MP Eudore Allard said the party had taken the action as a matter of principle.

Allard said the party had been recognized over the years throughout Canada and deserves the chance to ask questions of the government immediately after the Liberals and New Democrats.

Last Parliament, the nine-member Social Credit was recognized as a party by leave of the other parties.

House rules say there must be 12 members before being considered a party. Being recognized as a party carries several privileges.

When Roy attempted to speak on a point of order, Jerome said a Social Credit questioner would be recognized at a time of the Speaker's choosing.

Then Jerome recognized Pierre de Bane (L—Matapedia-Matane), who asked his question.

All parties have opposed giving Social Credit party status, which would make it equal to the 26-member NDP caucus in some respects.

Johnston selling

VANCOUVER (CP) — Johnston Terminals Ltd., a city-based highway transport and dock company, has sold three of its operating divisions.

An air freight forwarding division and a western pool-car operation have been sold to Cottrell Forwarding Ltd., while Johnston's pool-car service between Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal has been sold to Robinson Heath Western.

The air freight division will be taken over by Cottrell Air Services Ltd.

City rakes in $127,216 after tax suits launched

The city of Victoria has collected $127,216 since it started suing major property owners earlier this month to recover overdue 1979 taxes.

Writs in B.C. Supreme Court have been filed against 24 taxpayers, most of them companies, owing a total of $531,798.10.

Two owners, Vista Homes Ltd. which owed $25,199.44 and Jack Lacterman who owed $18,365.83, paid their taxes as soon as the writs were issued and others paid as soon as they were informed of the city's intentions to proceed with legal action.

The latest writs are against Town & Country Realty Ltd., $8,484.28; C.I.C. Development Corp., $11,286.95; Foresthill Development and Investment Corp.,$13,041.50; Martin & Sons Trucking Ltd., $12,730.54; Fifth Lehndorf (Canada) Ltd., $12,416.23; Hollyburn Properties (Alberta) Ltd., $19,112.90; Michael Collard Williams, $13,714.65; Pacific Princess Properties Ltd., $7,803.36; Ideal Sawmills Ltd., $19,670.89; Darwai Investment Corp., $16,414;

Study delayed

Environment Minister Rafe Mair has informed North Cowichan council the final report of the Cowichan Estuary Task Force has been delayed but will eventually be made available to the North Cowichan Valley District.

Mair in a letter to council said the major reason for the delay involves log-handling activities in the intertidal zone.

Mair said experts in coastal log-handling, dry-land storage and mill requirements have been engaged to assist the task force.

Protestants won't talk

LONDON (AP) — The two main Protestant political parties in Northern Ireland have rejected a British call for a power-sharing conference between Protestants and Catholics in a bid to restore limited home rule and end a decade of bloody sectarian strife in the territory.

The Official Unionist party and the Democratic Unionists, led by Rev. Ian Paisley, rejected the plan Friday, less than a day after Humphrey Atkins, the British secretary for Northern Ireland, made the proposal in a House of Commons speech.

Despite the rejections, Atkins said, "I believe there is hope."

He said he will push ahead with plans to hold a conference, perhaps next month, and said: "Everyone's going to have to compromise. Nobody's going to get what they say they want."

James Molyneaux, leader of the Official Unionists, said the proposed meeting "couldn't possibly lead to anything."

Any conference without the Official Unionists, the largest party in Nothern Ireland, has little chance of success, political observers said.

Gerry Fitt, the leader of the mainly Roman Catholic Social Democratic and Labor party, said Northern Ireland's 500,000 Roman Catholics "are very suspicious about talks under any circumstances to restore power to local authorities" in Protestant-dominated Ulster.

Under Atkins's proposal, British representatives would meet with the two main Protestant parties, Fitt's Social Democrats and the non-sectarian Alliance party to discuss restoration of some powers Britain took from Nothern Ireland when it suspended the Protestant-dominated Stormont parliament in March, 1972.

Official sources said Atkins's plan would give control of roads, ulitities and transportation to regional councils in which Protestants and Catholics would share power, but would leave Britain in control of security.

The Protestant parties, who represent the million-strong Protestant majority, have repeatedly demanded restoration of the suspended parliament but have refused to give Catholics any say in running Northern Ireland.

The Protestants fear that sharing power with Catholics will be the first step toward the eventual unification of Northern Ireland and the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish republic to the south.

Dozen throats cut; police lay charges

CHICAGO (AP) — A man on probation for a 1977 subway robbery has been charged with six of the robberies that left a dozen persons with their throats cut on city subway platforms, police say.

The man was arrested early Thursday after one of the 12 slashing victims died. Police Sgt. Larry Williams said James Ford, 24, was charged with six counts of armed robbery but was not charged in the slaying.

Police apprehended Ford several hours after Joseph Ardell, 64, was found dying on a subway platform. Police said Ford, who remained in custody Thursday night, was carrying a fold-up knife, a wristwatch and cash, all blood-stained, and his clothing was splattered with blood.

Ardell's throat was slit while he was waiting for a subway late Wednesday in the latest of a dozen attacks in three weeks.

Police said Ardell was the first to die from an assault by what some are calling the "Subway Slashers," but homicide detectives refused to comment on whether there is more than one suspect.

The victims were stabbed in robbery attempts during late-evening or early-morning hours.

Ex-Carter fund-raiser joins Kennedy team

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy has scored a major coup by wooing into his presidential campaign camp Morris Dees Jr., a fund-raising expert who served as President Carter's 1976 national finance chairman.

The defection of Dees, a 42-year-old millionaire lawyer from Montgomery, Ala., is not altogether a surprise, since he has long been associated with Sen. George McGovern and the liberal wing of the Democratic Party.

But the Carter forces had been counting on Dees to work for them and had used him this year to send out a fund-raising letter under the name of Lillian Carter, the president's mother. That mailing was made when it was not clear Kennedy would challenge Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Kennedy left Thursday on a two-day trip to New York and Boston.

Dees told reporters he liked Carter and had great respect for him but, "I've been for Kennedy ever since I met him during the (1972) McGovern campaign."

He said he worked for Carter in 1976 because Kennedy did not run.

Now, Dees said, he will make an all-out effort for Kennedy, with hopes of raising "a quick couple million dollars" and a full $17 million after six months.

Dees said initially he plans fund-raising dinners in Los Angeles, New York and four or five other cities between Dec. 10 and Dec. 16.

The dates mentioned by Dees were a hint that Kennedy would announce his candidacy in early December or possibly late November. Kennedy aides have said they want to score a symbolic victory by qualifying for federal matching campaign funds within a record number of days of the announcement.

14 hurt on Reno tour bus

SUSANVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Fourteen persons on a Vancouver to Reno tour bus were injured Thursday when a camper shell blew off a pickup truck and smashed through the bus windshield.

Only two passengers, Dorothy Westbury, 53, and William Westbury, 49, of Vancouver, were hurt seriously enough to be taken to a hospital, highway patrol officers said. They were treated at Washoe Medical Center in Reno, Nev., and released.

Most of the injuries were from flying debris, a spokesman said.

The highway patrol said the accident happened in the morning in high winds on U.S. 395 about 64 kilometres southeast of Susanville near the town of Herlong in northeastern California.

Basque for home rule

MADRID (AP) — Voters in the northern Basque and Catalan regions opted overwhelmingly for restoration of limited home rule but there was no indication Basque separatists are ready to end their guerrilla war for total independence from the Spanish government.

Final official results were expected later today, but the Basque Nationalist party, a moderate faction that supported the autonomy plan, said 88 per cent of those who voted in the three Basque provinces approved home rule.

Both the Basques and the Catalans lost the autonony they had traditionally enjoyed under the kings of Spain after they opposed fascist dictator Gen. Francisco Franco in the Spanish Civil War.

Under the home-rule plan, the two regions will get their own parliaments and courts, a bigger share of the national tax contribution and more control over public education and health care. The native tongues of the regions will join Spanish as official languages.

The two districts also will be allowed to organize autonomous police forces, but the national police force will retain over-all control, a sore point for some Basques after years of Franco police control.

Mikes carry screams

Times News Services

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (UPI) — With microphones tied to the whipping posts to amplify their screams, 27 persons convicted of various crimes were publicly caned Thursday before a crowd of 10,000 onlookers cheering "Allah! Allah!" after each stroke.

Two convicted murderers serving life sentences administered the malacca caning in a parade ground decorated with bright colors.

The crowd applauded if a prisoner managed to walk off without showing his discomfort, but some of those flogged were carried away unconscious on stretchers.

A year in U.S. for shah?

NEW YORK (AP) — The deposed shah of Iran, marking his 60th birthday today, took "with style" the news that cancer is spreading through his body, say doctors who are recommending he stay in the United States for up to a year for treatment.

"There is some potential for recovery," said Dr. Hibbard Williams, physician-in-charge at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Centre, where Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is resting following removal of his gallbladder.

With chemotherapy, the shah should have a 60- to 70-per-cent chance of surviving several years or more, doctors said Thursday.

The shah will begin treatment with anti-cancer drugs in three weeks, when he has recovered from the gallbladder operation, doctors said.

"I would want this patient to be in the United States for six months, maybe a year," said Dr. Morton Coleman, the hospital's associate director of chemotheraphy.

Coleman said the shah was first diagnosed as having chronic lymphatic leukemia, a slow cancer of the white blood cells most common in men older than 50. The same disease afflicts the shah's mother.

Tests show he has developed a more-virulent form of lymph cancer called histiocytic lymphoma, Coleman said.

Chrysler tentative pact puts UAW man on board

Washington Post

Chrysler Corp. and the United Auto Workers announced tentative agreement Thursday on an unprecedented three-year contract that would provide the troubled company with a large infusion of union cash — and in return give a seat on the board of directors to union President Douglas Fraser.

For the first time in 40 years of barganing by the three largest automobile manufacturers, Chrysler will not meet the economic terms of agreements hammered out earlier at the rivals Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp. providing essentially a 30 per cent boost in hourly wages over three years, assuming an 8 per cent annual inflation rate.

The decison to place Fraser on Chrysler's board also is the first time in American history that a labor representative has been selected a director of a major corporation.

"I sincerely believe that the voice of the worker will be heard in the highest echelons of the Chrysler Corp., Fraser said in Detroit Thursday, announcing what he termed "significant concessions from the economic pattern set earlier at General Motors and Ford."

Another substantial breakthrough in the contract announced Thursday would give the union a voice in investment decisions for Chrysler's pension funds.

Meanwhile, General Motors and Ford announced a substantial decline in third-quarter profits. GM's earnings plummeted to $22 million from $528 million a year ago, which the firm attributed to a sharp shift toward smaller cars.

Union spokesmen said Thursday their proposed contract with Chrysler would provide the ailing company with additional cash of about $403 million over the next two years — after which the automaker has projected a return to profitability, assuming government asistance.

On wages, accounting for $203 million of the lower Chrysler cost, the UAW will defer the effective date of two annual 3 per cent increases in basic wages — the first will be postponed until next March and the second until January, 1981. But, when the third annual increase goes into effect two years from now, Chrysler workers will achieve parity with their Ford and GM counterparts.

Cost-of-living increases will be in line with the contracts at Chrysler's competitors

In addition, the UAW agreed to fewer paid days off — "personal holidays" that are in addition to traditional national holidays. The UAW's strategy has been to build up the number of these days each year as part of a long-term goal of a four-day work week.

Farmer faces pot charges south of line

SEATTLE (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted a Canadian pig farmer on charges of participating in a conspiracy to smuggle 1,200 pounds of marijuana into Canada from Bellingham, Wash.

Glenn E. Maher, who farms near White Rock, is charged with conspiracy and possession with intent to distribute marijuana. Bail was set at $50,000.

Based on RCMP information, a camper and pickup truck were searched in the Bellingham area. Officials said 1,200 pounds of marijuana were found in 31 brown cardboard boxes.

Tougher juvenile law urged

Treat them like criminals - study

OTTAWA (CP) — It is time for the courts to stop treating juvenile delinquents as misguided children and start treating them as criminals, a federal government study says.

A report tabled in the Commons today says children should not be dealt with as harshly as adult criminals, but young persons who commit offences must take responsibility for their acts.

The report previews a new Young Offenders Act the government intends to introduce in the Commons in the next few months to replace the Juvenile Delinquents Act, which dates from 1908.

The law now says the courts should give juvenile delinquents parental-style care and discipline. They should treat a juvenile delinquent "not as a criminal but as a misdirected and misguided child . . . needing aid, encouragement, help and assistance."

Calling this philosophy outdated, the report says "young people will be held accountable for their behavior" under the proposed law.

But the new law would raise to 12 from seven years the age at which children could be charged with criminal offences. Only children over 14 could be tried in adult courts, and only for the most serious offences such as murder.

The Juvenile Delinquents Act applies to young persons under the age of 16 in most provinces, under 17 in British Columbia, and under 18 in Quebec and Manitoba.

The government proposes establishing a uniform age of 17 or 18 at which young persons would be charged in adult courts.

The report also recognizes that "young persons require supervision, discipline and control," and would give juvenile court judges more options in sentencing.

Juveniles could still be sent to reformatories for up to two years, but they could also be given an absolute discharge, be ordered to pay a fine up to $1,000, to compensate their victims or to do community work.

The new law would give young persons more rights in juvenile court and would allow them to tell their side of the story to the judge.

The government also proposes sharply reducing the number of offences a juvenile could be charged with.

The present law defines a juvenile as a child who violates the Criminal Code, federal or provincial statutes, municipal bylaws or is "guilty of sexual immorality or any similar form of vice."

Ex-NDP minister Bill Hartley launches open-door program

Socialist takeover of penniless bank

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Former NDP cabinet minister Bill Hartley has achieved every socialist's dream — he's bought his own bank.

It comes complete with walk-in vault, tellers' wickets, ledgers and account books and a manager's office with fireplace. There are spacious rooms upstairs which once housed the bank staff, and a luxurious seven-foot bathtub.

But there's not a penny in the cash drawers.

It's the old Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at Bay and Douglas which the bank vacated earlier this year after 69 years at the same stand.

Hartley bought the building recently and plans to move his insurance agency there on Dec. 1.

"The main floor of the bank lends itself to an insurance office," Hartley said Thursday during a tour of the bank.

He plans no changes to the historic building except a fresh coat of paint and eventual restoration of the heavy oak tellers' counter now covered by plastic wood panelling.

Hartley, former MLA for Yale-Lillooet and public works minister until the NDP defeat in 1975, likes to tell visitors of the bank's past.

It is one of the last of about 65 prefabricated wooden buildings in several styles built by the bank across the west during the boom years before the First World War.

Except for the foundation and brick work, every part of it was made and fitted together at the Vancouver plant of B.C. Mills, Timber and Trading Co., which produced hundreds of houses and commercial buildings and shipped them by rail as far as Winnipeg.

This particular bank was manufacturd in 1909. The pieces were packed in two boxcars and shipped to Victoria for erection. A similar one was demolished a few years ago in Ladysmith and identical buildings — all built from the classical-inspired designs by the Commerce bank's architects, Darling and Pearson of Toronto — were dotted across the Prairies. Creston, B.C., and Humboldt, Sask., had banks just like Victoria's.

All the pieces were numbered and prepainted at the factory. With the accompanying handbook, a crew could quickly put the bank together like a set of building blocks — an important advantage when towns sprang up overnight along new railway lines. The first bank in town acquired a competitive edge.

City council Thursday night liked Hartley's plan so much to save the building, it unanimously endorsed his request to rezone the property from light industrial to limited commercial. It also exempted him from a street widening plan for Bay which would have one day forced him to move the bank 10 feet over.

Young defends city police

Mayor Mike Young defended the Victoria police Thursday against what he called irresponsible and unfounded allegations that a few officers used excessive force against the so-called street kids.

The Times published a story Monday quoting community worker Shirley Wakeham's charges about some city police officers.

The mayor, who is chairman of the civilian police board which supervises police operations, told council he has received no complaints about police conduct, verbal or written, concerning alleged abuse of juveniles in the downtown area.

"The story does not appear to have any justification or substantiation whatsoever," he said.

There is a proper procedure for registering complaints which is not very difficult, he said.

Ald. Robin Blencoe said that "it takes a lot for some people to make a complaint" against the police.

He suggested there should be some independent agency or government department which could receive reports of complaints, rather than requiring people to complain first to the police.

"When you lay a complaint, that's a serious matter. People often say to me: 'If I do that, are they going to remember me?' " Blencoe told council.

"I say why don't you lay a complaint? They say: 'Who are they going to believe, three upstanding police officers or me?' "

Young said the province and the police commission may wish to consider the mechanics of laying a complaint against police. Some people may have "an inherent dislike of calling the police or appearing at police headquarters.

"It may well be that the allegations could be received by another level of government, but there still has to be an inside investigation."

He added: "I can assure you I have uncovered no evidence of intimidation by the police department."

Blencoe said he's sure that 99¾ per cent of police officers are blameless but "in any kind of institution you get some problems."

"Would you raise that to 100 per cent?" asked Young. "They're (problems) still yet to come. They haven't happened."

Ald. Larry Ryan said he talked to several policemen and they are very concerned about "blanket accusations."

"They would like identification. They would like to co-operate with the police board in resolving these problems."

Public less tolerant, wants more punishment

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians will demand harsher treatment for criminals in the 1980s — especially those convicted of violent crimes — because of rising crime rates, a government study says.

The report, presented Thursday to a closed meeting of federal and provincial justice minister, says the public is becoming less tolerant of predatory crime such as rape, murder, assault and robbery.

These crimes will continue to increase during the next 10 years as juvenile delinquents get older, says the report prepared by a research worker in the solicitor-general's department.

As a result, public pressure will grow for "more punitive measures including more and longer terms of imprisonment," it says.

Individuals already are more likely to be the victim of a crime than they were 10 years ago. But it is more likely to be a property crime — theft, break-in or fraud — than a violent crime.

Public opinion polls show the sentences believed to be appropriate punishment for these crimes "are often very severe (and) harsher than those actually handed down by the courts."

This hard-line attitude is also reflected in a dramatic increase in the number of people who are held in jail awaiting trial.

Canada holds almost twice as many people in jail before their trial than does England, the report says. It speculates that this may partly be due to backlogs in the courts caused by increased case-loads.

People are beginning to feel that the criminal justice system should look out for the rights of victims just as it protects the rights of those accused of crimes.

874,000 home dreams die

TORONTO (CP) — A rise of more than four percentage points in mortgage rates this year means that about 874,000 Canadian families have lost the ability to qualify for a $60,000 five-year term mortgage amortized over 25 years on a $66,000 home, experts say.

Mortgage rates have risen to 14.75 per cent from 10.5 per cent earlier this year because of successive increases in the bank rate geared to keep Canadian loan rates competitive with U.S. rates.

The estimate is based on Statistics Canada's 1977 income distribution survey. It is the difference between the number of Canadian families with annual incomes large enough to qualify for the $60,000 loan at 14.75 per cent and the number that would have qualified when rates were 10.5 per cent.

Today, a home owner considering a $60,000 loan on a $66,000 house will have to come up with $736.81 a month for mortgage payments, compared with $557 when rates were 10.5 per cent. When looking at a mortgage application, lenders normally require mortgage interest and taxes to make up no more than 30 per cent of a family income, to make sure it can comfortably carry the debt.

A family wanting a new house would have to earn $34,440 annually to qualify, compared with $27,280 at 10.5 per cent.

Frank Clayton, president of Clayton Research Associates Ltd. of Toronto, said that 1,813,000 of Canada's 5,866,000 families in the survey made more than $27,280 annually.

The higher mortgage interest rates affect monthly payments by signficant amounts.

In a standard 25-year mortgage with interest compounded semi-annually, the basic factors for various interest rates per $1,000 of mortgage are:

12 per cent — $10.32 a month per thousand.
13 per cent — $11.03.
14 per cent — $11.74.
15 per cent — $12.47.

Homeowners can work out their own payments by multiplying the above numbers by the size of the mortgage. For example a $20,000 mortgage at 14 per cent would be $234.80 per month ($11.74 times 20) and a $50,000 mortgage at 14 per cent would be about $587 per month ($11.74 times 50).

The real cost of a $50,000 mortgage over 25 years is $165,363 at 13 per cent, $176,082 at 14 per cent and $186,924 at 15 per cent.

PO near crack-up, Ottawa gets blame

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's postal system in on the verge of a nervous breakdown and the federal government is largely to blame, says Dr. Noel Hall, an experienced labor mediator.

Wildcat strikes, slowdowns and major confrontations between the 23,000-member postal union and post office officials will erupt as groups line up in bargaining combat positions for talks before the expiry of the collective agreement Dec. 31, Hall said Thursday.

He told an Industrial Relations Management Association workshop that the postal system is bordering on collapse and that anyone who thinks differently is reading the situation through rose-colored glasses.

Government officials have caused labor unrest by applying aggressive, counter-productive tactics in an unsuccessful attempt to resolve problems, he said.

"The problem is that rank-and-file employees, along with their leaders, have lost confidence in the proposition that the legally established bargaining and grievance processes will generate something approximating equity."

Hall said there are two alternatives to handling dissident action: punish union members for their behavior or design a way of dealing with grievances and removing the need for unlawful behavior.

However, punishment does not work, he said.

"The option chosen by the federal government shows all the signs of being counter-productive."

Hall, who has patched disputes between labor-management groups such the post office, school boards, hospitals and the Insurance Corp. of B.C., warned association members against "one-shot panacea solutions to industrial relations problems."

They are pawned off as magic formulas for labor ailments but they are not effective, he said.

One such trap is right-to-work legislation, he said.

Inflation wallops U.S.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — United States' consumer prices rose a steep 1.1 per cent during September as the country headed towards its biggest yearly dose of inflation in more than three decades, the government reported today.

The figures were released amidst continuing controversy over high profits being reported by U.S. oil companies. Texaco Inc. today reported the largest percentage increase in profits for the third quarter of any major oil company — a gain of 211 per cent to $612.18 million.

Prices paid by American consumers have now climbed at an annual rate of 13.2 per cent during the first nine months of 1979.

The actual inflation rate over the first nine months of the year is 10.1 per cent.

Energy and housing costs continued to soar last month and food prices climbed at the fastest pace since last spring, the Labor Department said in its monthly analysis.

Meanwhile, Citibank of New York, the nation's second largest bank, raised its prime lending rate to a record 15¼ per cent.

The government says the 15 largest refiners in the United States have overcharged customers $5.2 billion since the Arab oil boycott of 1973 — the equivalent of five cents a gallon for all the gasoline sold in the U.S. in the past year.

That total was announced as the energy department brought new charges — denied by both firms — against Texaco and the Atlantic Richfield Co., claiming pricing irregularities of about $200 million.

Pacific rim singers vie

Singer Arlene Duncan and composer Bob Quinn will represent Canada in the upcoming Pacific Song Contest telecasting from Christchurch, New Zealand as a CBC Superspecial, Sunday, on 2 and 6 at 8 p.m. Among other participating Pacific rim countries are Australia, Hong Kong, Japan, Korea, New Zealand and the Philippines.

Canada's representative is Du Maurier Search For Stars winner Arlene Duncan who will be singing the love ballad For I Could Love You composed by young Canadian songwriter Bob Quinn.

Twenty-one year old Arlene, from Oakville, Ontario, has studied music, theatre and dance at Sheridan College and Mohawk College. Her performance highlights include theatre appearances at Toronto Workshop Productions The Club; Theatre in The Dell, By Strouse; Theatre London, Kiss Me Kate; the Interlake Festival. Sunshine boys; television appearances as guest singer with Jack Jones on the Palace, CBC Network shows Afternoon Delight, Bob McLean, Wayne & Shuster, the Du Maurier Search For Stars, One Night Stand and Evening Out as well as variety shows and specials. Arlene has also appeared in numerous films and records as a studio singer for commercials and back-up singer for recording artists.

A panel of judges in each of the participating countries will view the telecast of the Pacific Song contest live from New Zealand via Pacific satellite, judge the songs and instanly transmit their selection decisions to the New Zealand officials. Their adjudications will be co-ordinated with others from the participating countries to select final winners. Guidelines for judging advise the panel "to choose the best original composition by considering originality, melody, rhythm and lyrics."

Canada's entry, Arlene Duncan

LOVE MUSIC — I am interested in some information about Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald. Are they alive? — Mrs. Emma Pritchet, Morristown, Tenn.

Sadly, both great singing stars of the '30s have passed away. MacDonald died in 1965, Eddy in 1967. Together, they made "Naughty Marietta," "Rose Marie," "Maytime," "The Girl of the Golden West," "Sweethearts," "New Moon," "Bitter Sweet" and "I Married an Angel." For more information read "The Jeanette MacDonald Story" by Robert Parish.

What various carpet fibres do and don't do:

By MARILIN HOFFMANN

Carpet is considered a "big ticket" purchase and one intended to last seven to 10 years. At popular price levels, good carpet is available in the $12- to $14-a-yard bracket, and better grades run $17 to $22.

When just the price of the carpet is quoted, an additional charge per yard must be added for synthetic rubber or hair and jute padding, plus local installation charges, which vary from city to city.

Q. What type of fiber is best?

A. There probably is no "best" fiber today. Specific fibers meet specific needs. Wool is the original natural carpet, and it is beautiful, serviceable, takes dye well and has good resiliency. It may not be as durable as many man-made fibers, and it has the highest cost. It therefore is used in less than 1 percent of all broadloom production. Wool is available for $18 and up per yard.

Nylon has become the strongest and most economical of all the synthetic fibers, and it constitutes about 80 per cent of all production. Nylon resists stains, dyes well and offers good abrasion and crush resistance.

It can take on a silky sheen or the low-luster look of pure wool. Nylon has been improved over the years, and today's third generation nylons are permanently static-proof as well as soil-resistant. Such built-in advantages might cost an extra $1 to $2 per yard. Labels should be checked for both static and soil resistance.

Other fibers used in carpets are polyester, acrylics and olefin. Olefin is used primarily in kitchen and indoor-outdoor carpet, where its resistance to fading and staining is important. Acrylics are more expensive than nylon and though they feel more like wool than any other fiber, their use has declined in recent years. Polyester has good abrasion resistance and bulk, but is more susceptible to oil-based stains and soil.

Q. What else should a good label include?

A. The name of the fiber, backing, information on flammability, lightfastness, colorfastness and the results of wear tests. General care and cleaning instructions should be there, as well as information on where carpet should be used. Labels have become increasingly helpful and informative and should be read carefully.

Q. Does carpeting help conserve energy?

A. Yes, carpeted floors are warmer than noncarpeted ones, because drafts of cold air are kept out by the carpet and pad insulation. Thermal tests indicate that heating bills can be cut down by as much as 13 per cent when carpeting and underpadding are used throughout a home. A carpet's pile construction has air spaces or pockets between the carpet's pile fibers to hold in the warm air.

Q. What about colors?

A. The choice never has been wider. Every subtle pastel, and clear bright hue is available today. The current range of blues is enormous, but remember that blue still is the color most susceptible to fading problems. Medium colors are most practical for not showing lint, soil and animal hairs. Patterned or textured carpets probably are the best for camouflaging wear and soil, but they have to fit lifestyles and decorating schemes. Bold patterns on the floor insist on dominating the decorating scheme, so choose wisely.

Q. What should you take to the carpet store with you?

A. Exact measurements of the rooms, chips of the paint colors used and swatches of fabrics and wallpapers used in the room or rooms. Also take color snapshots of the rooms as they now look and perhaps a few magazine clippings of rooms that you like. Speak frankly to the salesman about your needs and preferences, and listen to his advice on which carpets might serve best.

Q. How do you find a reliable retailer?

A. Seek recommendations from friends or business acquaintances or Better Business Bureaus. Look for a dealer who is well established and who is known to stand behind the merchandise and its installation.

Refinish old furniture and save some money

By JOSEPH DANIELS

First-time condominium owners sometimes have the urge to rush out and buy new furniture to complement their new surroundings. This can be expensive, particularly after meeting the new mortgage costs, maintenance fees and regular monthly expenses.

But there is an alternative — give your old furnitue a face-lift. You can save money and add a unique touch to your home by refinishing an old attic-horror or thrifty flea market purchase. An old dresser can look like new by giving it a new finish and replacing the doorknobs.

The Miniwax Co. offers the following tips on preparing the wood, correcting imperfections and selecting the finish.

1. Inspect wood for fungus or mildew which will appear as gray-blue streaks or blemishes and cannot be bleached out or covered.

2. Sand to delete scratches, nicks and tooling and to provide a tight, smooth surface. Any dust can be removed with a lint-free cloth or tack rag.

3. Raise shallow dents and gouges with steam by placing a damp cloth over the dent, then pressing down hard with a medium-hot iron. The steam causes the wood fibers to expand.

4. For gouges and cracks, mix animal glue with the sanding dust, tamp in the mixture, let cure and smooth down with a razor blade.

5. Choose the wood finish to fit in with the color scheme of your home. When applying the finish, use a clean brush or cloth to penetrate deep into the wood. Deep penetration prevents dents and scratches from exposing bare wood.

6. After finishing, apply a protective surface. Finishing waxes, antique oil and polyurethanes offer a variety of protective surfaces.

7. For long-lasting beauty and durability, polyurethane gloss and satin finishes are ideal for furniture subject to heavy use.

A REALTOR SPEAKS

Buyer's remorse attack soon goes

By RICHARD DANIELS

Real estate salesmen will confide that 'buyer's remorse' attacks many first-time home buyers. "It usually hits within a day or two after they have found their 'dream home' and have made an initial deposit" says Jamie McGregor, manager of Canada Trust on Oak Bay Avenue.

Somehow all notions of pride of ownership, the small house with white picket fence and real estate as a sound investment become clouded with the array of confusing paper work, the promise of responsibility and work and a 30-year sentence to a monthly mortgage.

No matter how high the financial investment seems, the new buyer should realize that with careful budget planning, he will manage adequately, and there is no need to call that real estate agent first thing in the morning and cancel the whole deal.

"For the buyer who has considered carefully and has planned his finances with a realtor who is conscientious and concerned, the buyer's remorse soon passes into the background — where it belongs", adds Mr. McGregor.

Considering Selling?

May I most strongly urge that you list your house or other real estate with me, Murray Lawson. You can be sure that you will be represented by a responsible, experienced realtor who will work hard for you, spend his own money to advertise your house in the most advantageous manner, and get you ACTION on it. This is no sideline or hobby, it's my chosen profession, so I won't keep your house "in the back of my mind." I'll keep it in the FRONT, as handling real estate sales with integrity and in a professional manner is ALL I do for a living.

Send for plans to build this sturdy rocking horse

By STEVE ELLINGSON

How about a step-by-step pattern for building this authentic replica of an old-fashioned carousel horse?

Our pony is graced with elegant features as well as sturdy design. There are no sharp points or extended features to harm your child. All the ends are smooth and rounded, wooden dowels were used rather than nails, and even the mane is made from wooden balls.

The seat of the rocking horse is several layers thick, and could even withstand the weight of some adults (you won't be able to resist trying it yourself).

The pedestal-rocker is constructed so that it will rock forward and backward with only a minimum of motion. Our full-size traceable pattern with step-by-step instructions and pictures to guide you, will allow you to create this horse which measures approximately 48½" long by 32" high. We chose a clear lacquer for classic-style finish. You can also make it as fanciful as you want in colorful lead-free paints.

To obtain the Carousel Rocking Horse, Pattern No. 657, send $4.00 (Please add fifty cents extra for postage and handling) by cheque or money order to:

COLLECTIBLES

Of caps and keys and Cola trays

Tray photographed at R. Newberry Antique and Stamp Shop.

by John Hearn

Number One contender for my Collector of the Year award (a plaster cast of Joe Clark's footprint) is David Richardson of Perth, Ontario, who writes:- "I have been collecting for about ten years, specializing in paper items.

These range from newspaper clippings to calendars via matchcovers, business cards, postcards, advertising material, magazines, books, etc. I trade some of these items at the Curiosity Corner, a small store where I work one day a week. It has only been open two months and already I have made over $75.

The owner buys stock at auction sales and I cover local garage sales and flea markets. Here are some of the items I have sold — a 1938 brochure and map of the 1000 Islands for $1.00. A set of five pictures of the Dionne Quintuplets given away by Quaker Oats in 1935 for $2.00. A Rideau Beverages drink bottle, 50 cents. Popular Mechanics Shop Notes complete, 1938 for $1.00.

"We get into all kinds of things like comic books, depression glass, chinaware, old jewellery, books and furniture but I am starting to get seriously interested in Coca Cola items.

I have made a start with magazine advertising from the 1950s and earlier. I recently traded a set of German made salt and pepper shakers for two Coke trays — one is the 1973 reproduction of the 1926 golfing couple; the other has not been definitely identified yet but I think it is an original from the 1950s. The scene on the tray is of 6 Coke bottles sitting on wicker serving wedges with sandwiches. The wording is Serve Coca Cola, Sign of Good Taste. The tray is in very good condition and has been valued so far at about $30 — 3 times the price of the salt and pepper shakers.

"So I feel I have learned a lot about antiques and collectibles from experience and from printed information such as newspaper articles and special interest books. I know it is no big deal so far buy buying and selling has added a great deal of zest to my collecting enthusiasm."

I print David's note as a perfect example of the joy of collecting with a limited budget. His letter sheds light on that old problem of mine when I am asked to answer the perennial queastion "is it valuable?"

David's one and two dollar items were extremely valuable in terms of the fun he got out of them. A tray which originally could not have cost more than 50 cents is registering a 6000% appreciation when it trades for $30. But is that what my questioners mean by "valuable"? I never know.

The Coke tray photographed is not an original, but a reproduction of one produced in 1900. It sells for $15. Other Coke tray reproductions are priced as low as $7.

Another collector of advertising items is E. L. Mitchell of Thornhill, Ontario, who has acquired more than 400 peaked caps showing the crests of industrial firms, sports clubs, etc. and wonders if anyone else collects them and how best to display them.

The caps? Four hundred of them? Surely you would only save the crests themselves. You could then display them on the wall in glass panels. What is interesting about this item is that it defies all the laws of collecting which sends people in pursuit of items which were once made in millions, and then thrown away in millions, becoming rare in the process.

The same might be said of other advertising specialties such as key tags and pens.

Does this mean that they are not worth collecting? I would not say that, but the collector must be content to collect purely for the pleasure with not even as much hope of profit as David Richardson had — at least not yet. Given another hundred years these "worthless" advertising items will provide a unique record of companies which no longer exist and sports teams which have long since played their last game.

Today eventually becomes The Past, if we wait long enough. Readers' letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, R.R. 1, Lowbanks, Ontario, N0A 1K0.

New homes overlooking Swan Lake selling fast

by Anne Swannell

On land that was farm land only a few years ago, new houses priced in the high seventies and eighties range are going up quickly, and selling like hotcakes.

Castle Properties, National Trust, and Seaspray Realty all have homes for sale in this development on Nelthorpe Street and Greythorne Place.

There are also homes for sale directly by such developers as Branson Construction and R. Philps Construction.

These homes are uniquely located in Victoria, the higher ones, which back onto Saanich Road, have lovely south-facing views of Swan Lake, with Saanich Municipal Hall visible in the distance.

All are only a few steps away from access to the Swan Lake/Christmas Hill nature trail which goes all around the lake, and which takes about an hour to circumnavigate.

It's a superb place for family-trecks-on-a-Sunday, with its wood chip paths that take you through hedge-rows, out across fields, become wooden floating bridges across the lake itself, and turn into easy-to-navigate boardwalks that carry you over fallen trees and marshy places.

Everybody from grandmother to the littlest tot can enjoy this park. There are miles of grassy places to run in, and lots of good hide-and-seek spots for the elementary school set to play in.

A bird blind in the centre of the park is the perfect place to watch birds without them watching you, and there are path-side signs at various intervals along the route that explain the geology of the area.

The park is completely free of litter, is obviously well-maintained by the Swan Lake Nature Centre Society.

The park was originally part of the thirty acres owned by the Pendray family, whose farm house is still on Saanich Road, east of the new homes being built.

Jeff Stewart of Steward and Hudson put in streets, lighting, and sewers when he owned the land. It was then sub-divided and sold to various developers, who are all "doing their own thing" on the various lots they purchased. This results in a unique sub-division of new houses which features many different looks rather than several variations on the same theme.

There is one house which is an adaptation of a Cape Cod design complete with old fashioned verandah and a rambling appearance, many which are extremely modernistic with skylights and balconies, as well as the more traditional type of home.

HOUSE UNDER CONSTRUCTION has been carefully fitted in beside one of the oak trees. A few branches had to be sawn off, but the tree was saved.The view from the upper level of this house is shown on the adjacent page.

PHOTOGRAPHED from the landscaped turnaround at the end of Nelthorpe, these houses back onto Saanich Road. The trucks and vans belong to various contracotrs who are busily at work on various facets of construction

Marks on the furniture and repairing kitchen faucets

NOW YOU KNOW

By George DALGLEISH

Q. We have marks on some of our furniture and we are not too sure what they are and how to get rid of them. Could you please help us?

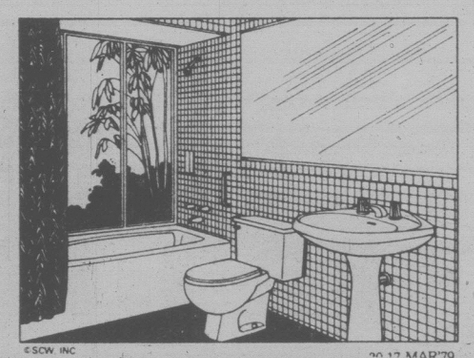
A. There are a number of simple solutions to remove minor marks or stains from furniture. Many times marks on furniture look worse than they really are. Most furniture marks are caused by setting something either wet or hot on the surface. Many times these marks can be eliminated by simply using a good quality furniture cleaner such as Circa Furniture Cleaner available from department stores. If this doesn't work and the surface of the furniture has been marred then use 0000 Steel Wool. Rub the steel wool on the surface in the direction of the grain. For more stubborn marks ordinary lighter fluid could be used, although be very careful with the lighter fluid since it is flammable. Use a clean piece of cloth dipped in the lighter fluid. Methol Hydrate will remove most water marks. If none of the above works, then before attempting more severe methods of repairing the marked furniture, try to determine what the finish of the furniture is. It could be either lacquer, varnish or a liquid plastic. Also you should determine what the wood is and whether it is solid wood or a veneer. After these things have been determined consult a professional furniture re-finisher before attempting any further methods. If the stain has gone right through the finish and has actually marred the surface of the wood then likely a complete stripping of the finish and re-finishing is the only way that you will save the furniture.

Q. On cooler days in the winter we have noticed excessive amount of condensation on our windows and when it gets below freezing we notice a certain amount of condensation in the corner right on the wall in the living room. What causes this and how can we rectify it?

A. When the humidity level in your house is too high for the thermal efficiency of the windows in the wall it causes the moisture in the air to condensate on the windows and walls on cold days. As air cools its ability to hold water vapor is decreased. Air in a home will cool as it comes in contact with cold surfaces such as windows and poorly insulated walls. As the air flows down the wall or window it becomes even cooler as heat is transferred out through the wall or window. The cooler it becomes the more moisture it gives up as its relative humidity is reduced. That is why moisture and ice will form at the bottom of a window or wall first. In the case of condensation forming in the corner of a wall, this is usually due to the method of construction. Without doing anything to the windows and the walls you can lessen this problem by reducing the amount of humidity in the air in your home. Therefore proper control of relative humidity is important. But even when there is the proper amount of humidity in the air and the thermal efficiency of the window is inadequate you will still notice a small amount of moisture on the window and this is normal. It's only when this condition causes problems by causing the water to run into the wall that you have to take further action. The introduction of fresh air from outside through a forced air heating system will help to reduce the amount of humidity in the air in the house. If you don't have an exhaust fan in the kitchen that is exhausted right outside you could install a fan in the ceiling connected to a de-humidistat. Then the fan will come on whenever the humidity reaches a certain level. If you still have too much humidity after trying all of the above, then you should buy a dehumidifier.

Q. We have problems with the grout in our ceramic tile. Over a period of years it all turned grey and now we have to renew the ceramic tile around our bathtub and on our bathroom floor, and we wonder what we can do to prevent that from occurring again.

A. Most ceramic grout used in bathrooms is white. Because of this it eventually turns grey and becomes difficult to clean. There is a special grout that has a silicone already mixed in it made by General Electric Silicone Division. This will help to keep the grout white longer. There are a number of tile grouts available in pre-mixed colors, and usually they are only available from ceramic speciality stores. A colored ceramic tile grout of course will solve using grout on a bathroom floor. You should never use white grout on the floor and I would prefer a grey one. However other dark colors would work just as well. Colored grout lines can be used to accent the many tiles that are available for bathroom floors and walls. If you use a colored grout that does not have a silicone additive in it then make sure that you spray the grout after it has dried properly with a silicone spray. This is to seal the grout and prevent it from being damaged by moisture. Whenever you are going to clean the tiles in the bathroom use the silicone spray as a cleaner.



Q. The single-lever faucet in our kitchen sink is leaking and when we called a plumber he said that it would cost just about as much to repair it as to install a new faucet. Can we repair it ourselves?

A. That all depends on what's wrong with it. You did not say where the faucet was leaking. However, if it is leaking where it sits on the base then the "O" ring is defective. If it is dripping from the spout even when the lever is tightly closed, it is likely that the washers are worn or damaged. The first step in repairing a single-lever faucet is to turn off the water. If you have a two-storey house and the is on the main floor you should open a tap in the basement to allow the water to drain down through the system so that it doesn't come out of the tap as you are taking it apart. On most single-lever faucets you find a small set screw under the handle near the base. Use an Allen key to remove the set screw and then remove the level. Next remove the cap from the faucet. Make sure that you do not damage the cap by letting the wrench slip on the cap. Make sure that your wrench is tight or place a piece of cloth around the cap first. After the cap is removed you then remove the control ball and you will see two washers on the ends of two springs. Simply insert new washers on the ends of the springs and re-assemble the faucet. Repair kits are available consisting of washers, "O" rings, control valves and springs, from your local building supply store or plumbing specialty store. If the springs don't look to be squashed down then there is no need to replace them. However if they look damaged or rusted they they should be replaced also. Sometimes the control ball itself is defective and it's just a matter of replacing it. In most single-lever faucets the control ball has a notch in one side of it that fits into a little bump on the edge of the seat for the control ball. Therefore you can't put it in wrong. If it is the "O" ring that is defective and causing a leak, then remove the spout and replace the "O" ring.

Ideal plan for a tight urban lot

PLAN OF THE WEEK

Here's an amazingly spacious home design of the front-to-back split level type which is perfectly suited to the very narrow frontage residential building lot.

It provides a surprising amount of usable living space and convenience features for the medium-size family, and allows for the future development of additional bedrooms or a recreation facility in the unfinished partial basement. The urbane tone of the exterior is achieved through a combination of horizontal channel siding, brick veneer and chimney, and with shake or traditional shingle roof.

The eave-protected entry leads directly into a compact reception foyer and right, into the convivial living room, which features a wide cantilevered-hearth masonry fireplace.

A well-planned U-shape kitchen/dinette has generous countertop work surfaces, abundant cupboard storage and an excellent work triangle configuration. The dinette area has good natural lighting, and its layout invites the installation of built-in banquette-style nook furnishings.

Access to the large unfinished area is from the dinette hallway. This area could be finished as a family room-recreation area, or as additional bedrooms for the larger family.

All three bedrooms are positioned on the second level, elevated six risers from the main level. Each has excellent exposure for view and natural lighting, and generous closet storage. The master bedroom has a three-piece ensuite with shower behind a convenient pocket door.

Altogether an excellent plan for the tight urban lot, combining style and logical layout for comfort and convenience.

Plans for design No. 78-1088B may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $85.00 for the first set and $14.00 for each additional set, or by the backage. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $120.00 and an eight-set plan package, also including the first set, is only $150.00.

Whichever method you choose, please include $5.00 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 5% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Magazine, Series 42, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 320 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.75 ($2.00 plus .75 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.

HOMESCENE

DANIEL THIBODEAU of 1315 Bay Street, piling garden refuse into one of two boxes he has in his garden. Daniel and his wife Marjorie are both great gardening fans, growing vegetables, strawberries, raspberries, and "huge rhubarb". They haven't had a garbage can for years; everything is recycled, and even paper is torn up and composted. Old and new compost is layered alternately to speed up the rotting process. They ought to know all about making good soil, since they farmed on the prairies, and later in the Duncan area. Daniel was born in Weymouth, Nova Scotia in 1897, and they've lived on Bay Street since 1966 in the house which used to belong to Marjorie's parents.

Re-roofing ? Choose roof color carefully

Color and texture in roofing material allows homeowners greater flexibility in exterior decorating. Color can be used to visually complement, contrast, enhance, or blend.

A dark colored roof, for instance, can help make an unusually steep roof seem less obtrusive. White may be used for the opposite effect, to create a sense of airiness and height. A light-colored roof attracts the eye and directs it upwards.

APARTMENT LIVING

Common sense best consumer protection

By JOHN BUCHANON

The best safeguard in shopping for furnishings to spruce up your apartment or condominium — even in this consumer protection era — is the oldest: Individual common sense.

And common sense is the protector least applied in the marketplace, says Ben Helms, a manufacturer of wooden decorative accessories.

"The average homemaker just plain hasn't learned to shop with his or her own best intersts in mind," Helms maintains. "Common sense is the most powerful and most overlooked weapon in your battle for home design supremacy."

Helms is a firm believer in shopper self-protection. He advises consumers to master these simple but potent shopping techniques:

1. Know your needs. Advance knowledge is power. Start with a shopping list to avoid needless impulse buying. Take along pictures, color swatches, color samples and editorial pictures from magazines. Pre-select items that complement your overall design scheme.

Arrive at the store armed with knowledge and a plan.

A logical outline: furnishings now owned and their styles and colors, furnishings needed with complementary styles and colors, room measurements and numbers of doors and windows.

2. Budget your plan. The amount you budget, of course, depends on total income, requirements in fundamental areas (housing, food) and how important home atmosphere is to you. Write down the items you need and estimate costs for each. Arrange items in priority. Add up the column. If more than budget, cut from bottom.

3. Background yourself. Read and heed decorating books, consumer services of government, advice booklets from associations and newspaper articles. Good home design is a constant learning process. There is much good information available. Put it to use.

4. Read labels, hang tags, seals. Find out the manufacturer's name, materials and construction methods used, finishes applied, use and care recommended, performance that can be expected, guarantees and warranties inluded. File labels, hang tags and seals for future reference.

5. Buy quality. The best quality is usually the best buy for products you expect to use frequently or keep for many years. Lower quality items may be a better buy for furnishings you plan to use only a short time or infrequently.

6. Inspect merchandise. Well-made furnishings last longer and look more attractive than poorly made pieces. High price alone does not indicate the best quality or most durable item. Therefore, carefully examine any item you are considering.

Sit in chairs, and sofas. Feel fabrics. Pull out drawers and open doors. Pull out and lie on sleeper-sofas. Stretch out on mattresses and box springs. Check joint construction. Rock furniture to test sturdiness. Switch lamps on and off. Check sizes to make sure items will fit into your floor plan.

7. Check guarantees and warranties. Know exactly what is covered, for how long, who is responsible for meeting the terms, and what your responsibilities involve. Fill out and mail warranty cards. File all guarantees and warranties for future reference.

8. Know store policies and procedures. Reliable retailers stand behind merchandise and guarantees and are fair in handling reasonable exchanges, returns and complaints.

9. Compare several stores. The same item may sell at different prices in differnt stores. Stores offering services such as at-home shopping, decorating and furnishing advice, credit, delivery, installation, may charge more.

Shop around until you know which stores offer the merchandise, prices and services you want. Time is a resource.

Check newspaper and magazine ads, catalogs and phone information to make shopping easier.

10. Learn to complain. Notify the retailer or manufacturer of your dissatisfaction and fully explain your complaint. Most companies appreciate receving complaints. It helps them take corrective action.

"Nowadays the manufacturer who doesn't listen and react to genuine consumer complaints isn't going to be with us long," Helms said. "In the decorative accessory field, a why-don't-you-do-this consumer is our best product scout. We're all ears."

Questions to ask yourself before buying a first home

For those who are worried about making the biggest purchase of their lives, these are the central questions the prospective home buyer can ask him/herself before hand.

The buyer should consider his prospective neighbors, the community and how the new location will affect his life.

In new developments, in particular, the prospective home owner should be interested in what plans are being made for surrounding properties. Find out what streets are destined to become larger arterials and what general changes are in store for existing residential neighborhoods.

Some may be set aside for future apartments, community businesses or even light industrial uses as the community expands.

Don't be shy about asking city or district officials about the future of an area. Find out if the community is considering a sports stadium, regional airport, shopping centre or any other development tosettle nearby.

Ask about traffic patterns and other alterations to the community that will result from any changes. Try to determine if the area will continue to be residential in nature.

Ask too about the local government's policy on granting zoning variances to land uses that are spelled out in an area's general plan. Excessive variances will render a general plan useless.

Generally, older, well-kept neighborhoods will remainthat way because of the investment its owners have made.

Prospective owners can ask the salesman, builder or lender about community associations or organizations and whether property owners are required to join.

Also it's wise to ask about building and architectural restrictions or other covenants, formal and informal, which residents are expected to observe.

If you look at a prospective house with the idea of remodelling, adding a fence or making some other changes, check into building regulations for the area. Some areas have limits on fence heights, allowable accessory buildings, size of porch overhangs, decks, carport construction and other additions or changes that might be wanted.

When evaluating a chosen house, use common sense and intution as well as factual information. How does the house "feel" to you? Consider it critically for its friendliness. Will you be comfortable in it? Does the building face the direction preferred with sunlight exposure where it is wanted? If the family likes houseplants, is the exposure right?

Think about how the house relates to the street and traffic in terms of sound as well as visibility. Look out the windows and listen when visting a house for sale.

Is the building screened from neighbors and the street for maximum privacy, and does it offer the amount of openness preferred?

Space for family vehicles, especialy recreational types, also should be available on the site. Some communities

A prospective buyer should visit the home and neighborhood as many times as needed to satisfy his curiosity. Walk around, observe everything that is happening there.

Visit it at night, in the daytime, morning and afternoon.

Especially try to visit the home during a leisure time when the neighbors are at home pursuing their outdoor activities. Find out if they are compatible with yours.

Area businessmen may have some interesting commentary on a neighborhood. Ask the grocer, hardware or paint dealer, banker, insurance agent or others in local business about things that puzzle you. Find out why they like the area.

Whether to buy a new or existing houe also is a question that deserves close consideration. There are advantages and disadvantages to both types.

The buyer of a new house usually has the opportunity to select the color and patterns of tile that will be used, the carpeting colors, architectural design and other accesories available. All the appliances and mechanical systems in a new house are new.

Baths or showers ? Let's settle it!

There has been some conflicting information about the energy conservation aspect of water useage. Do baths use less water than showers, or is it the other way around ? Obviously, a long hot shower will use more water than a shallow bath, and a full-to-the-neck tub takes more water than a quick shower.

Al Playfair, commercial/industrial representative of B.C. Hydro says that mums and dads have been footing the bill for "the cleanliness is next to godliness fetish" that teenagers in particular are fond of indulging, often with the cost or the conservation of the hot water they're using furthest from their minds.

But B.C. Hydro has the answer! And, best of all, it's free. They have available a nylon restrictor that fits inside a shower head. A card comes with it, telling how to install it. This little device simply fits inside the shower head, which is threaded on hand-tight, and can be undone easily by most home-owners.

The restrictor cuts the water used for showers in half, even though most people can't see the difference in the water flow, and if you've got someone in the house who has a penchant for long showers, chances are he/she won't even be able to tell you've installed one.

They are available for the asking at the customer service desk at B.C. Hydro.
